Foreword

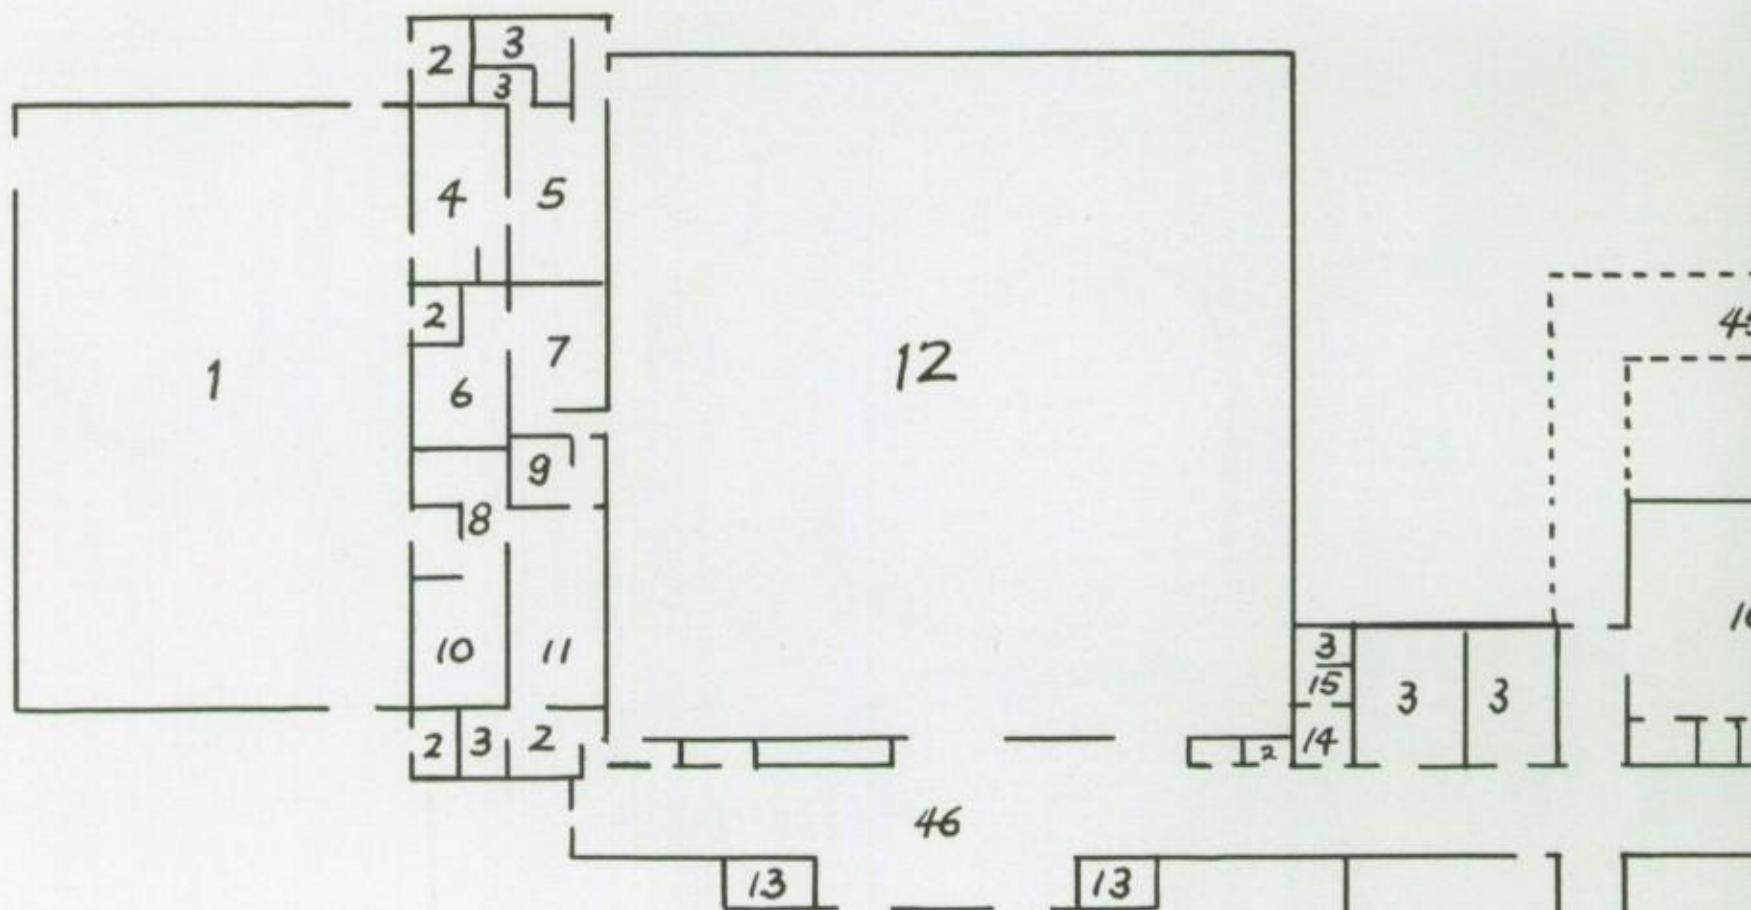

A new year . . . a new school . . . a new yearbook . . .
The new year is 1961-62 . . . the new school is Carroll High School . . . the new yearbook is the Argosy. The year is self-evident, and the school name is obvious as students come from five townships in Carroll County. But why was the yearbook named the Argosy? Argosy denotes a large ship, especially a large merchant vessel, which comes into port heavily laden with precious cargo. Each year we make a voyage into realms of unexplored knowledge, unknown classmates, and unfamiliar situations. When our ship returns to port, it bears an important cargo of knowledge and friendships we have acquired.

Every day the main purpose of education was more apparent—the growing and expanding of young minds in living and learning experiences. The excellent facilities in a beautiful, well-equipped building provided these opportunities. As you progress through the pages of the Argosy, it will become clear why we know that . . .

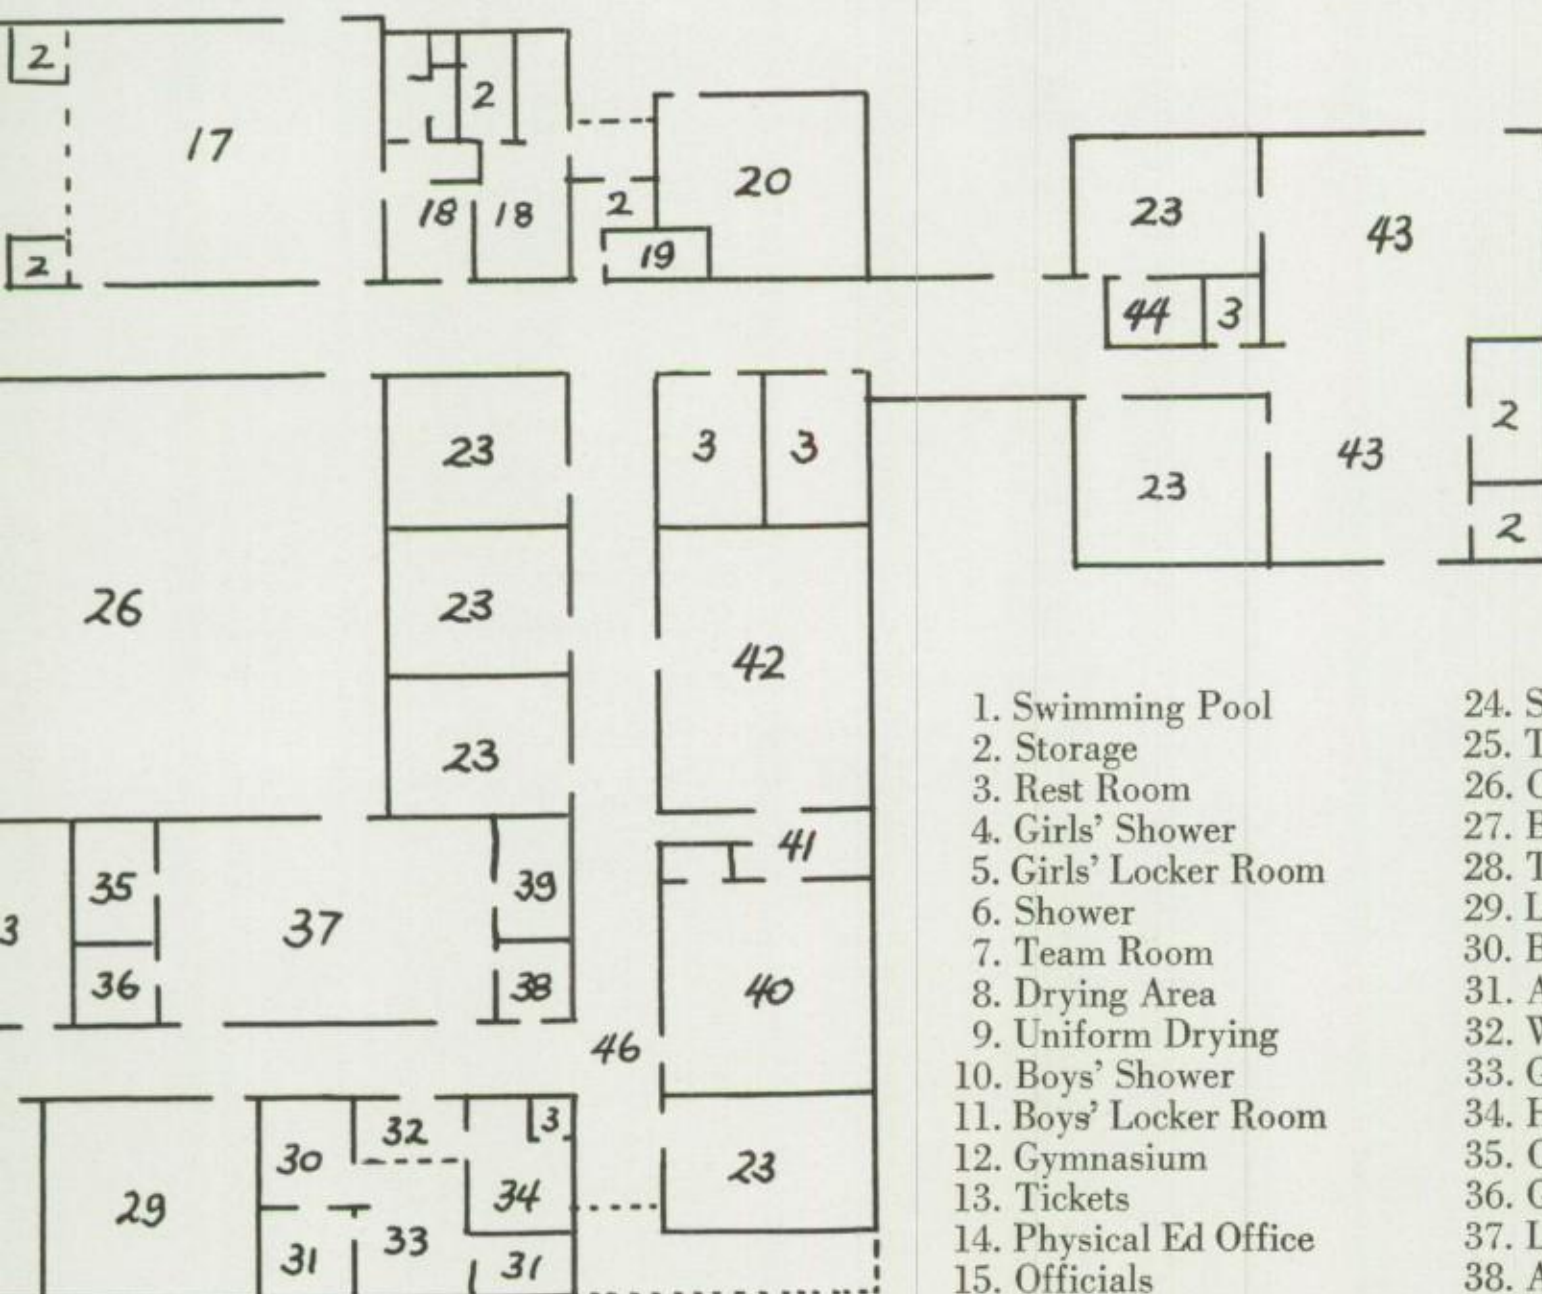

We're the luckiest kids!!

Stimulating surroundings proved

On September 11, 1961, Carroll High School opened its doors to its first enrollees.

To begin the day, Ed Langston and Stan Evans took their turn at raising the flag.

To give you the inside story on why we think "We're the luckiest kids," a personal tour has been arranged for you. Later in the book, you will be shown the classroom facilities; so now just follow Mr. [REDACTED] and you will see the non-academic assets of Carroll High School.

Superintendent Robert Forbes proudly stood by the plaque commemorating the building of Carroll High School.

to be conducive to learning.

The well-equipped library provided an ideal atmosphere for students to study.

Guidance counselors, Effie Douglas and Harold Eaton, conferred on counseling problems.

The administrative offices

Kenneth Cooke, principal, assisted Bill Walker and Sharron Alma in preparing their enrollment cards.

Like every other teacher, Robert Fraley checked his mail box for the morning's mail and announcements.

Mr. Cooke discussed the school calendar with Mr. Forbes in the superintendent's office. The artist's conception of the completed Carroll High School rested on the desk.

directed the school's activities.

When Paul Goad suffered an attack of appendicitis, the health room proved its value to its first casualty.

Secretaries, Ruth Ann Ayres and Peg Brower, flashed messages over the intercommunication system.

Dorita Avery and Linda Hurd sold school supplies to Carol Pullen from the well-stocked book store.

Facilities for relaxation

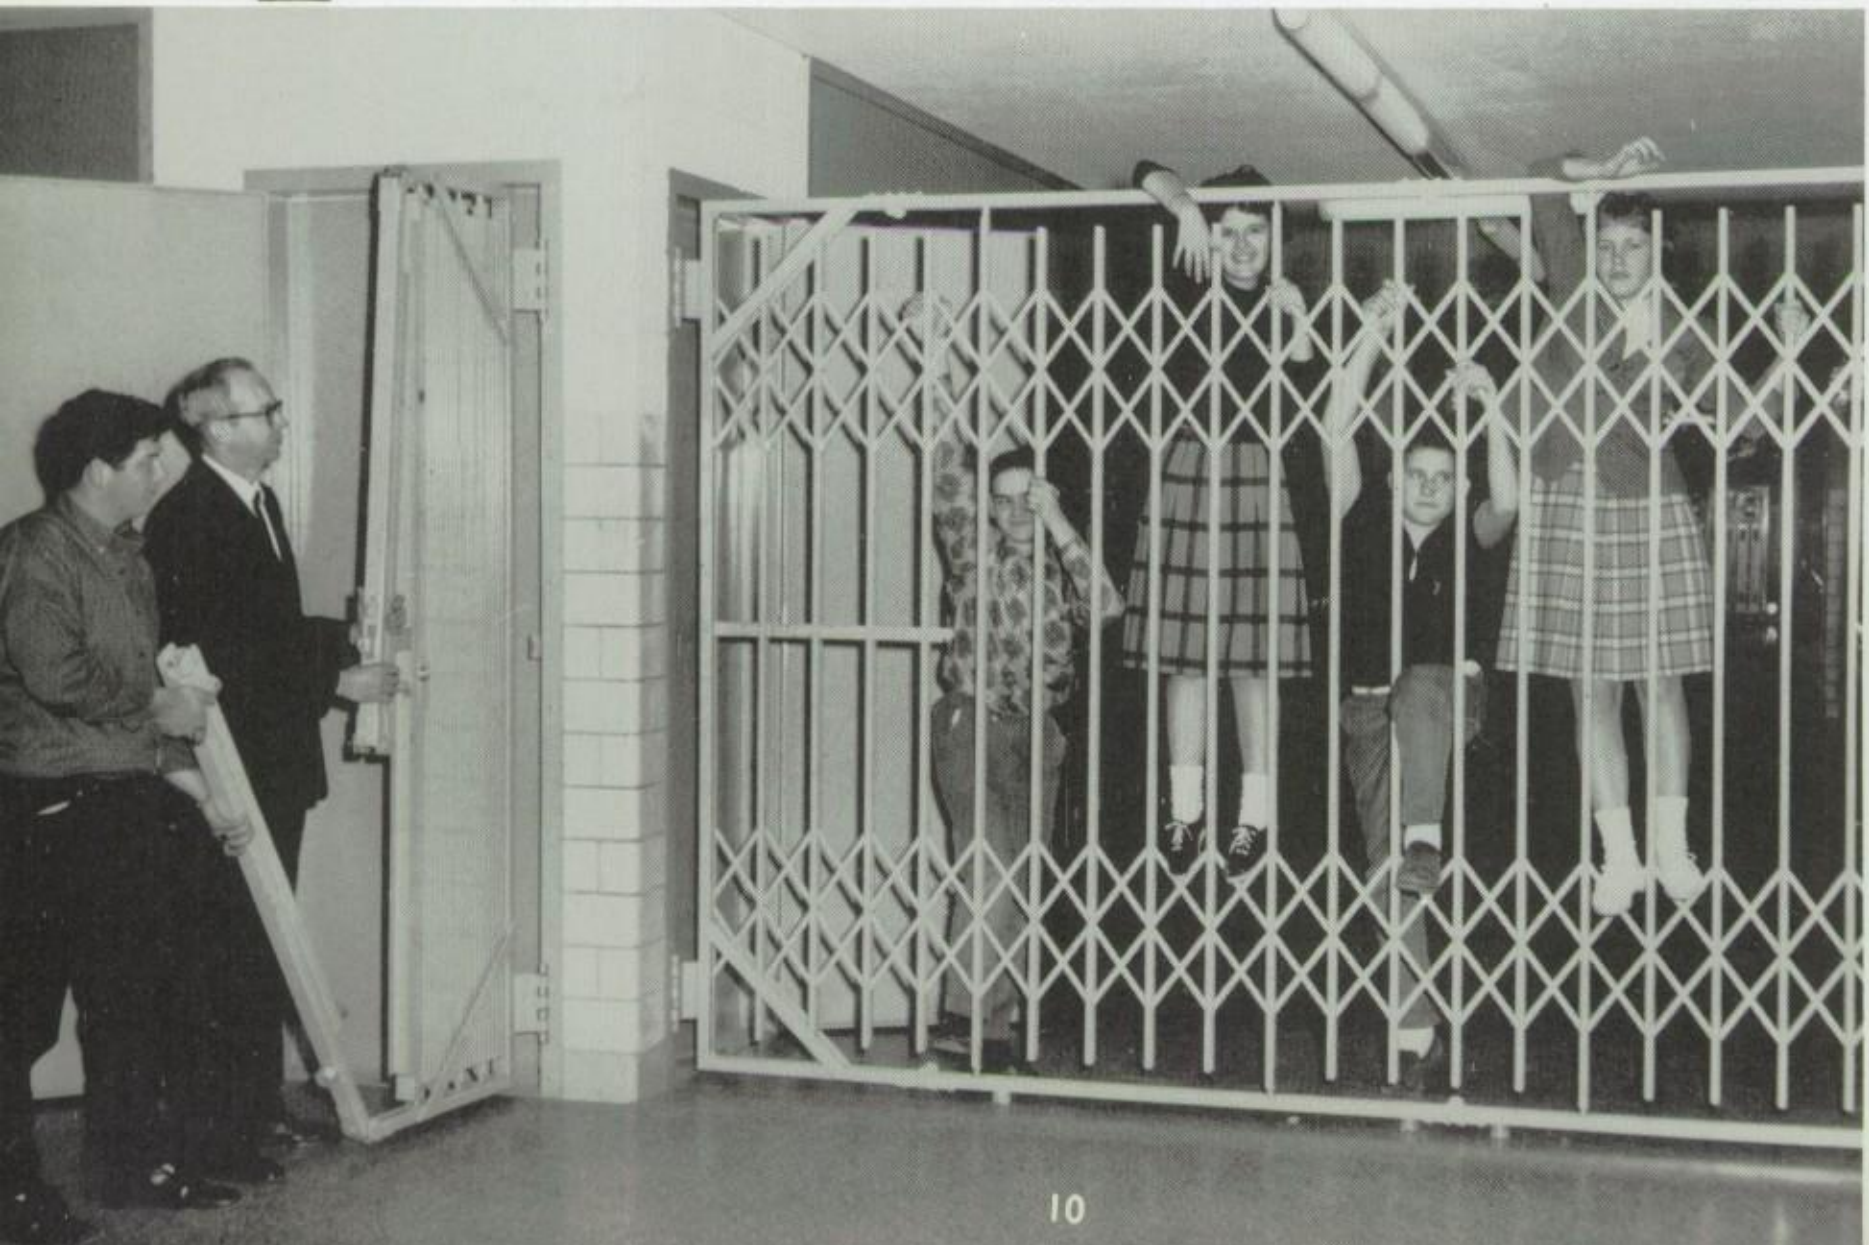

After coping with the between-class rush plus his crutches, Dave Minich found an ice-cold drink hit the spot.

Although dual-compartment lockers served as excellent space for storing students' belongings, Joe Collins and Lou Ann Milner found they served even better for a rendezvous between classes.

Freshmen, Gary Stephan, Terri Cook, Max Oyler, and Kay Eikenberry, found that when Mr. Cooke and "Slim" Trent latched the security gates they meant business.

accented the school day.

The lounge for men teachers provided a pleasant atmosphere for relaxing, socializing, and a little extra paper grading for Ralph Thompson, Rollo Leimer, Jack Nelson, and Steve Mills.

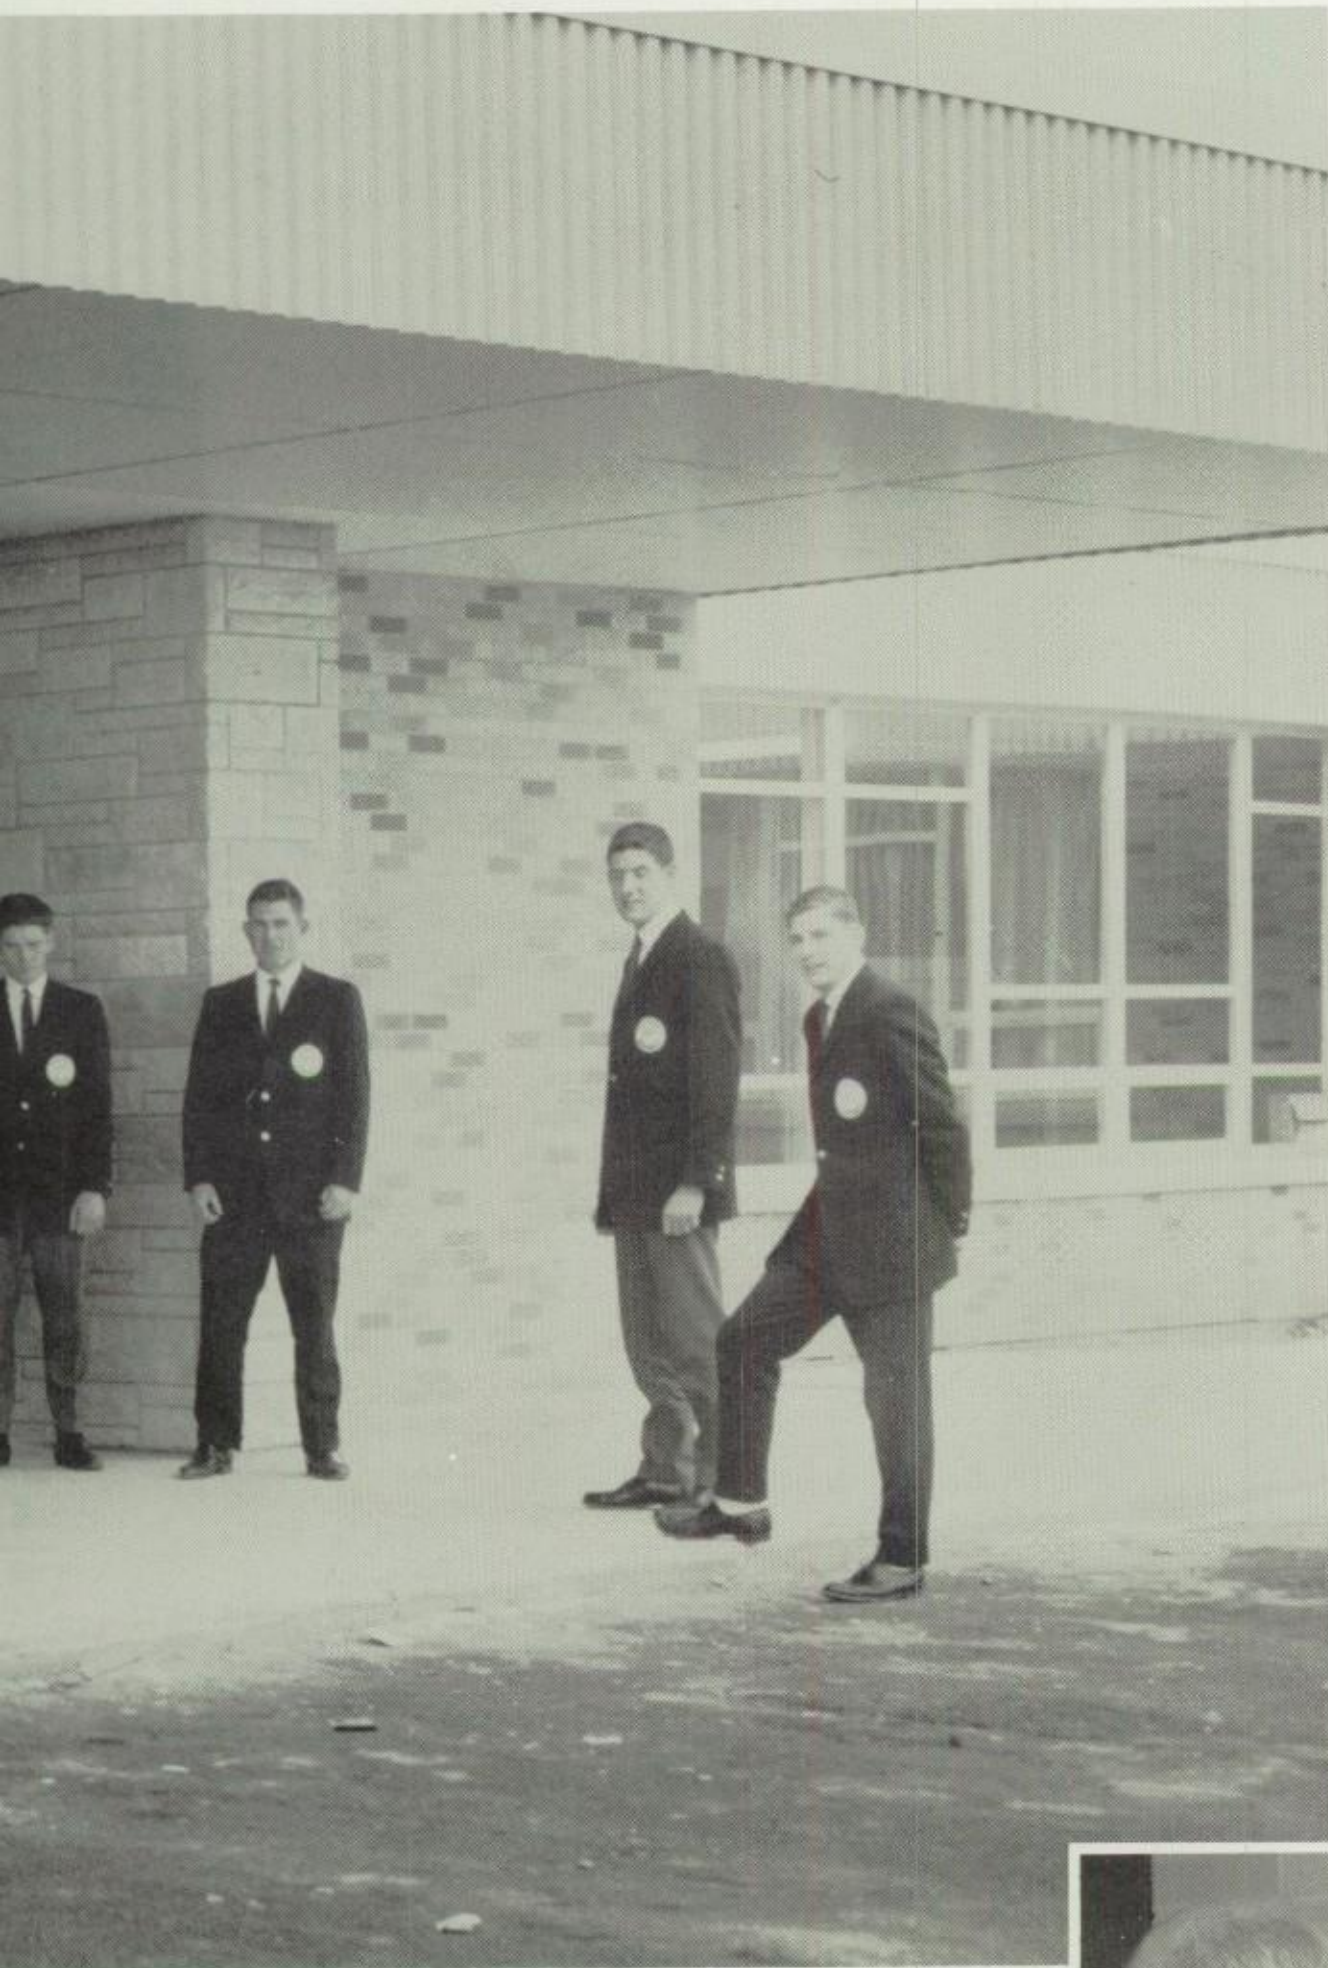

"That won't give us much time after school," observed Ed Wagoner to Luther Hinkle and Jim Payne as they checked the B team practice schedule. Being confined to the building during the lunch hour, students often visited the lounge for candy, cokes, or just plain relaxing.

The Varsity Cougars met at the gym entrance before leaving for away games. When they made their pre-game appearances in their striking new blazers, they were a team of which to be proud. The navy blazers bearing white Cougar emblems were purchased by the adult booster club.

attracted many avid fans.

Enthusiastic Cougar fans, Gene Mitchell and Peg Brower, eagerly purchased basketball tickets from Ruth Ann Ayres. Could Mr. Mitchell be a bit prejudiced?

Conveniences were provided

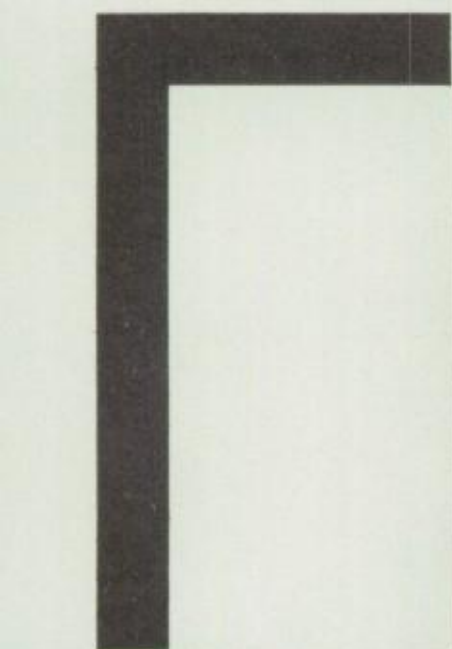

Carroll students went wild as the Cougars scored again.

Frank DeBruicker, athletic director, booked another ball club for future schedules.

for students and the public.

From 3:45 p.m. to 8:40 a.m., the lonesome halls awaited the on-rush of students for another day.

"Make for the fall-out shelter!" shouted Terry Bright and Jim Wason as they descended into the fall-out tunnel which runs the full length of the back hall.

Teen-agers, Sandy Lesh and Jane Downham, found Carroll High to have all the comforts of home—even a telephone for student use.

At the Sunshine concession stand, Wanita Howard, Jeananne Stephenson, Linda Langston, and Sheila Alma, treated weary editors, Ann Guckien, Jean Anderson, and Anita Curtis, to a coke.

The multi-purpose auditorium was Steam tables and double serving lines enabled students and faculty to be served quickly and efficiently.

Although lunch periods were only thirty minutes, students had time for food and fun.

With a few minutes work, the cafetorium became an auditorium for presenting convocations, plays, or public programs.

the center of student activities.

Mildred Hausenfluck, head cook, and Donnabelle Myer found the preparation of 320 lunches a day an easy task with the use of modern, stainless steel equipment.

Doris Sheagley and Dorothy Fisher made ham salad sandwiches, while Jean Kingery prepared potatoes for the pressure oven. Joan Segraves washed baking pans.

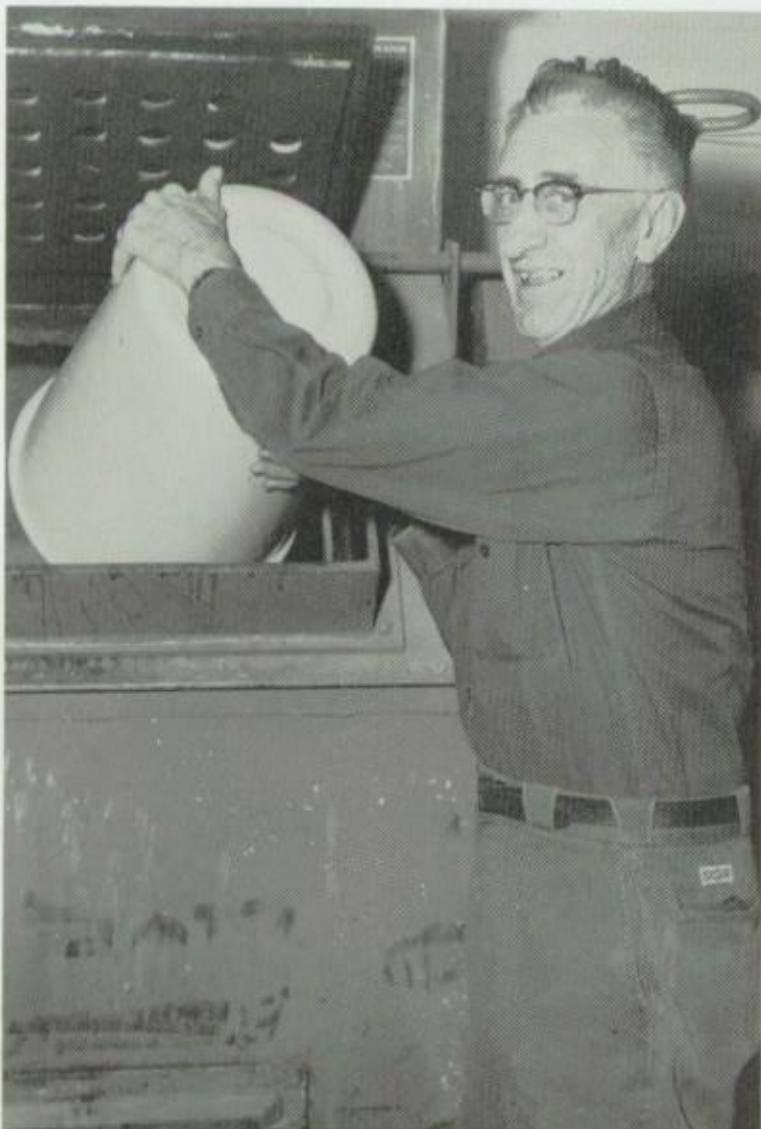

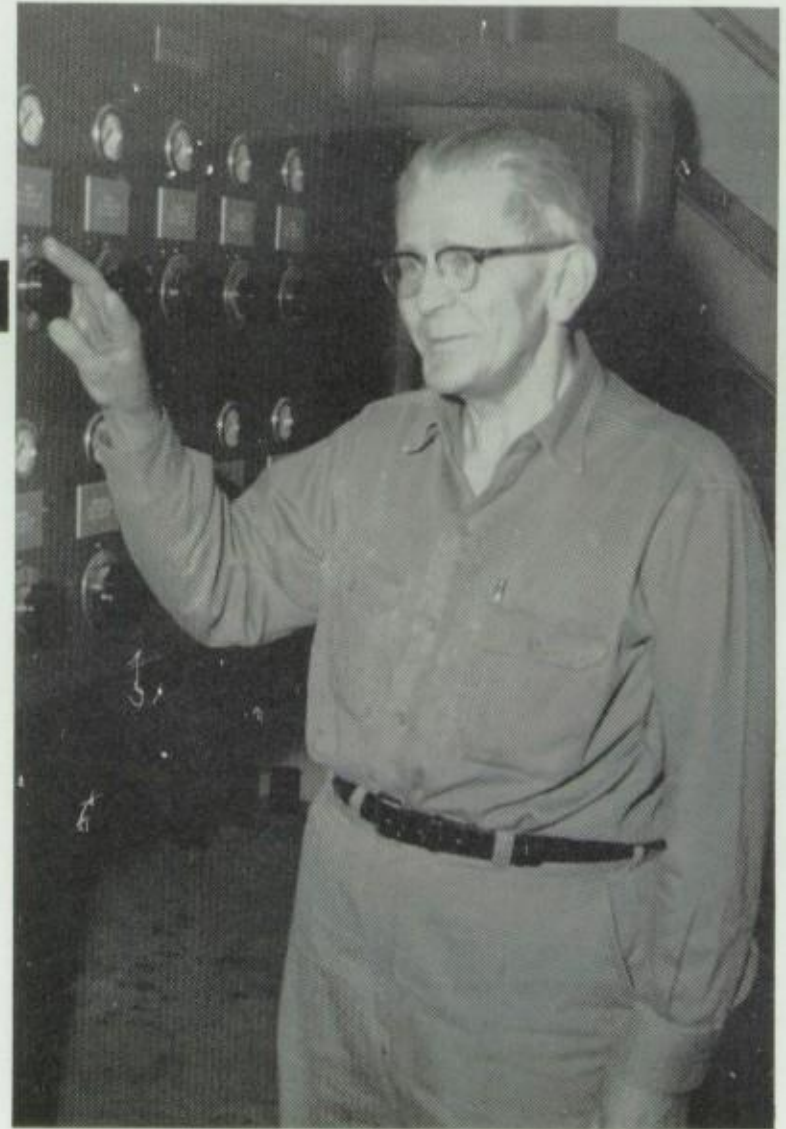

Jean Mann and Joan Segraves handled the noon-time rush at the deposit window, while student, Louis Bixler, sent the dishes through the 180° temperature of the dishwasher.

Auxiliary personnel were necessary

Violen Yoder, matron, had a cheerful smile as she went about her duties each day.

After greeting the students each morning, Dan Yoder, head custodian, checked the heating controls.

To assist with the post-school day cleaning, Lawrence Price emptied overflowing wastebaskets in the incinerator room.

to maintain a smooth-moving organization.

The good-natured bus drivers made stops at all the schools in the consolidation both morning and evening. FRONT ROW: Charles Rhine, Paul Bernard Stephens, Robert Draper, Paul Achor, Vernon Hausenfluck, Dwight Ross, Doyle Jervis. BACK ROW: John Seward, George Ehrman, Donald Fife, Willard Hicks, Vernon Frantz, Mitchell Sanderson, John T. Downham, D. F. Bieghler, Delbert Eikenberry, Charles Ross.

For protection from the elements, many students boarded buses under the bus canopy, while others claimed their cars from the students' parking area.

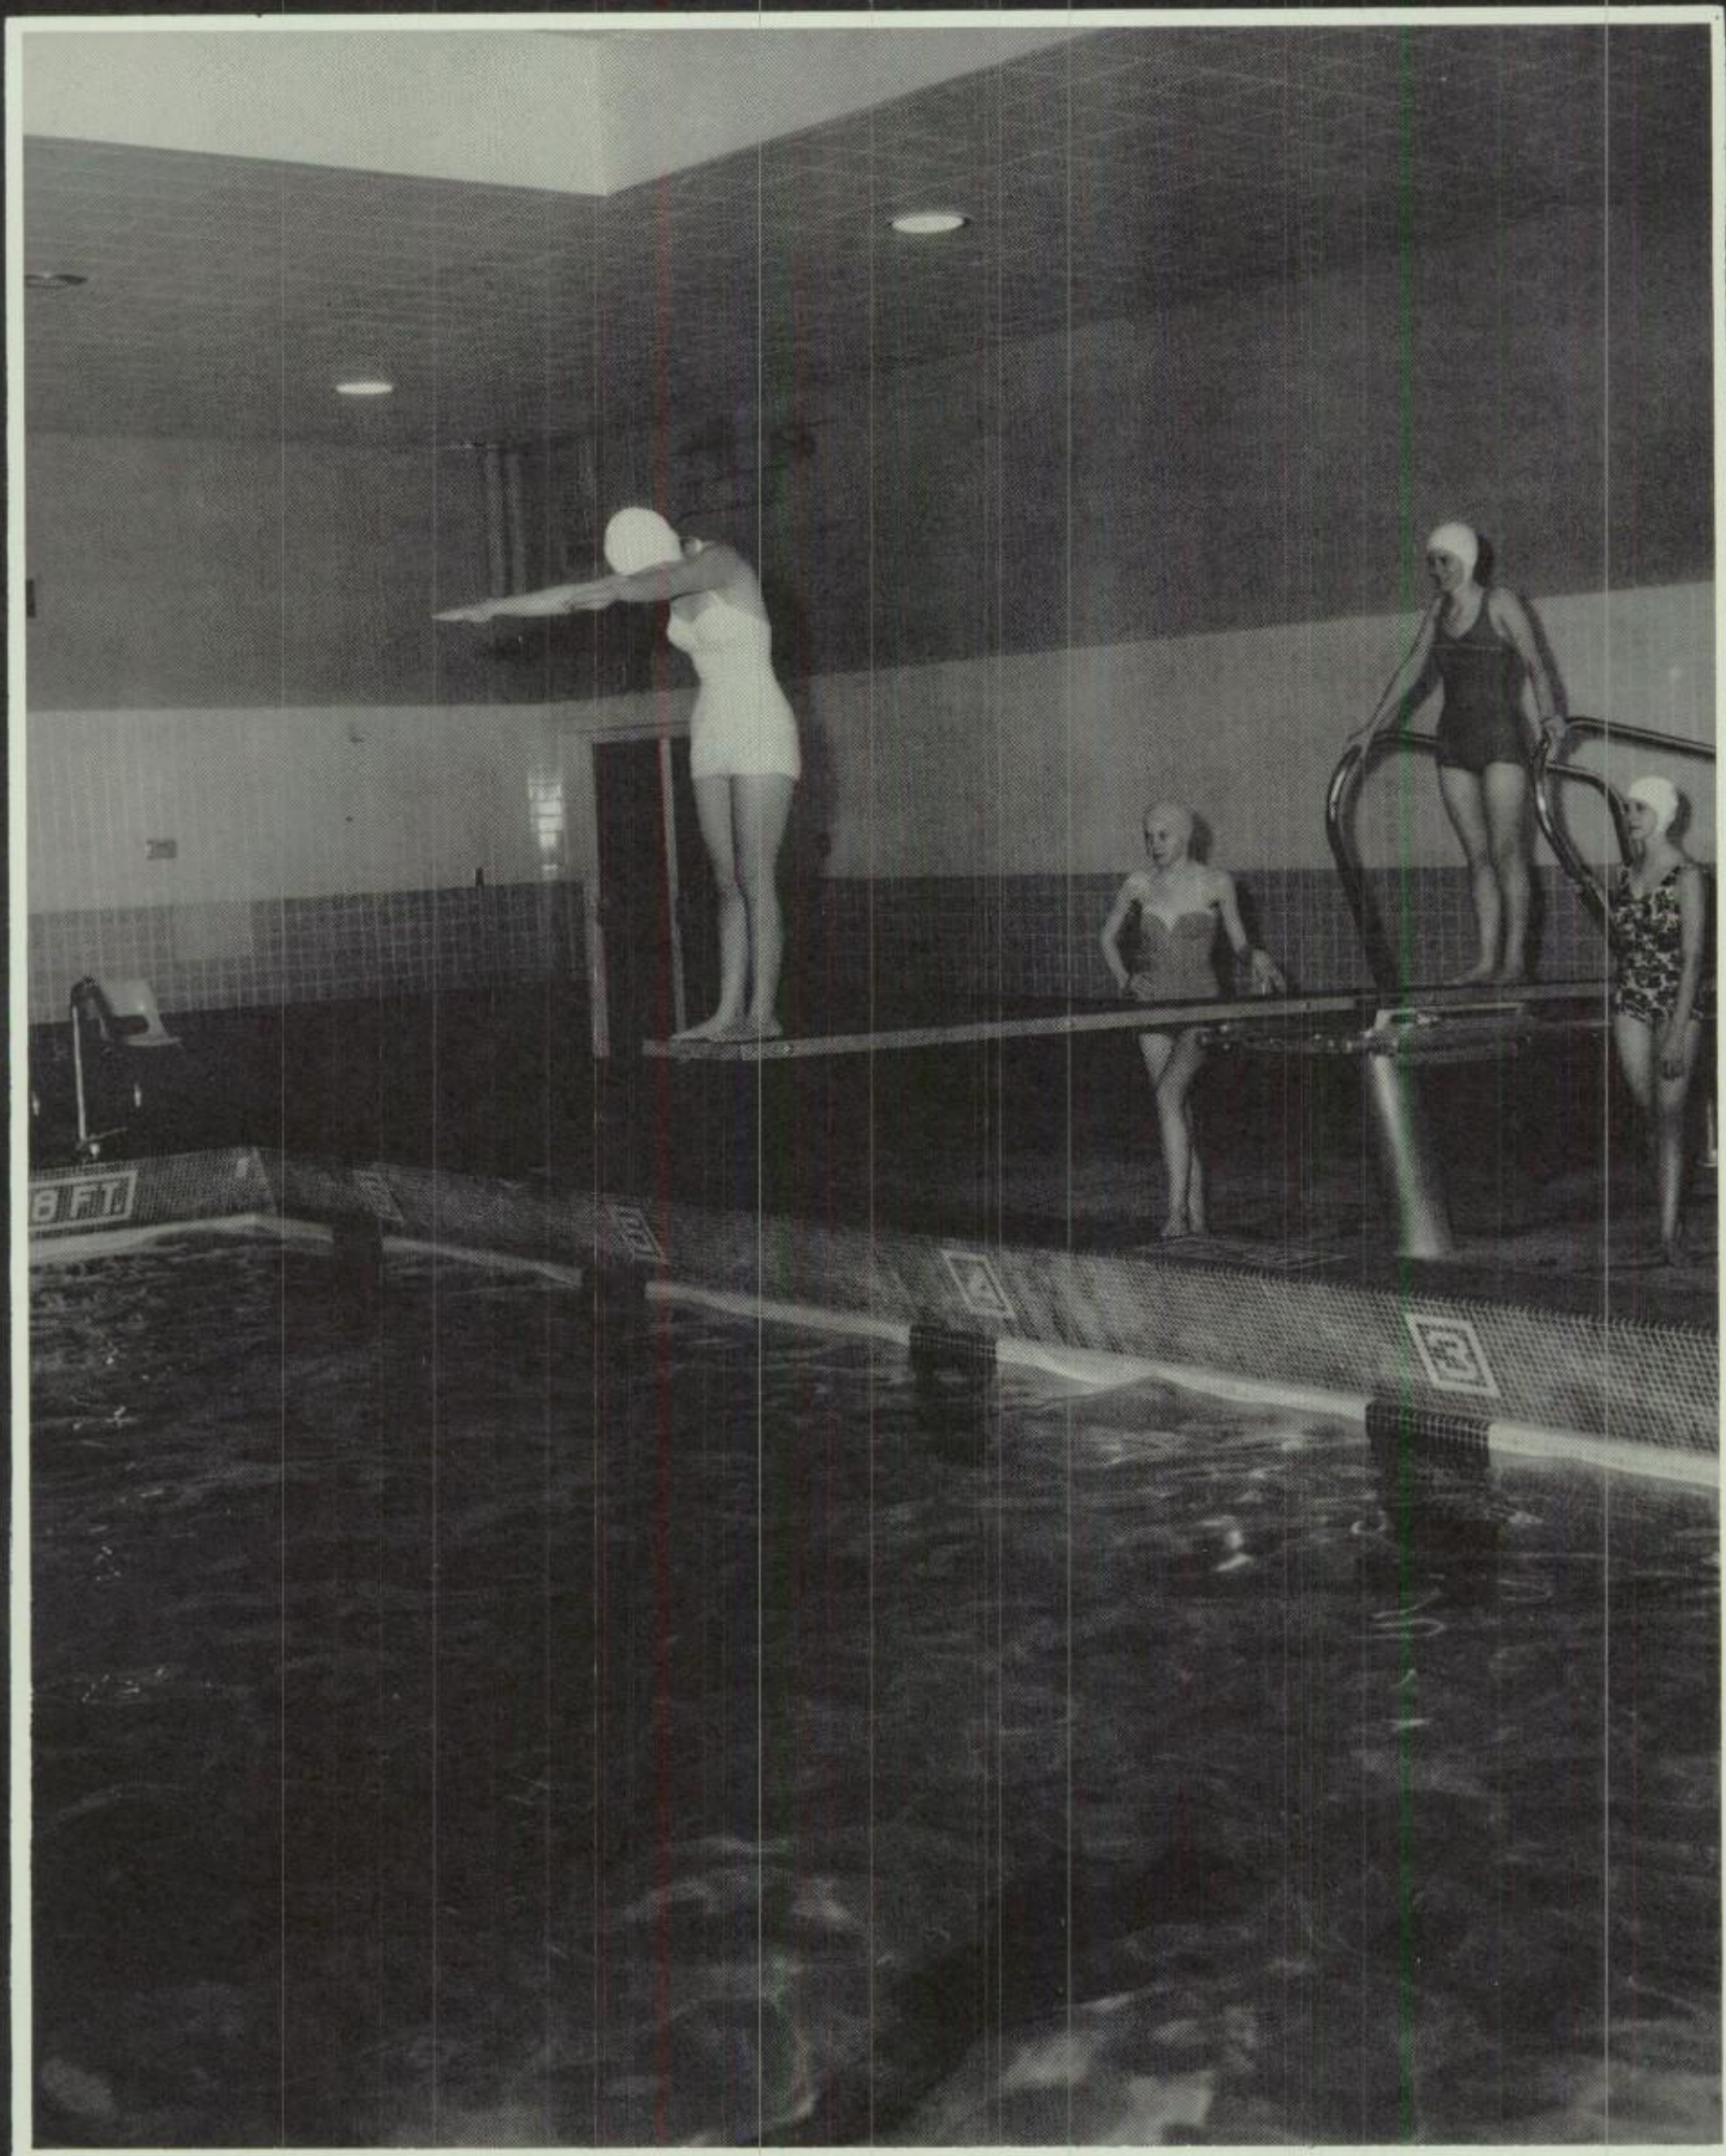

Knowledge comes, but wisdom lingers.

Academics

English classes enabled us to better

Subjects, predicates, direct objects, and simple sentences were just a few of the challenging problems put before the Carroll High students by the English instructors. The first semester grammar was offered, and the second semester literature was studied by all. Not only by reading the interesting short stories and novels in their literature books, but also by receiving the Reader's Digest monthly, the students acquired grammar practice and interesting reading material through their daily class instruction.

To give the juniors practice in composition, Ruth Murphy outlined suggested topics on the board.

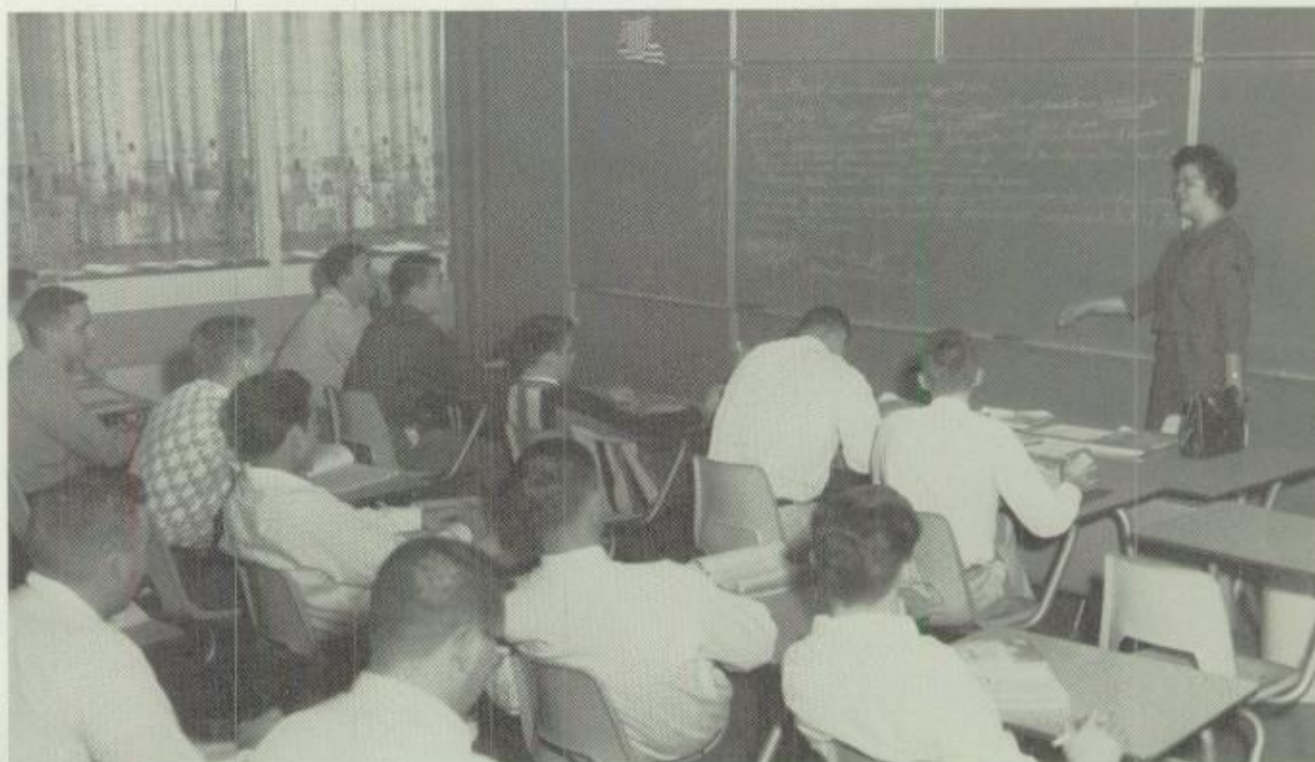

Library facilities proved invaluable to English students throughout their high school careers.

Martha Bozworth searched the library shelves for possible English novels for her senior literature classes.

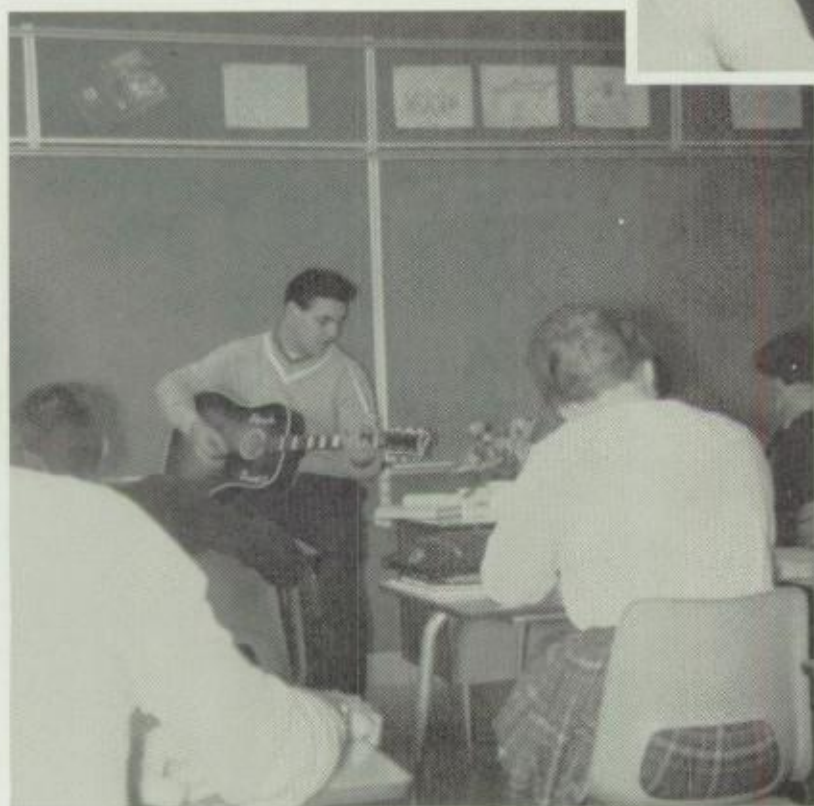

express ourselves in our native tongue.

Dotti Ledman, substituting for Martha Bozworth, gave an outline for the semester research theme to her all-male, fifth period senior English class.

Paul Jones led the senior English classes in singing ancient English ballads.

Speech classes were very busy this year. The students not only learned to give speeches, but they also studied how to breathe correctly, interpret poetry, and change the pitch of a voice tone. There were 22 speech students, and the interest in speech increased rapidly. Through these courses, a person could learn to speak and express himself more clearly. The class members also participated in speech contests.

Joe Huse presented one of many forceful orations in Ralph Thompson's speech class.

Foreign language classes helped

Presiding at the console in the language laboratory, Helen Eaton taped individual translations of her French students.

Parlez vous francaise? This familiar phrase was often heard in the halls of Carroll High. Both first and second-year French were offered. In the language laboratory, the students were able to experience the most modern teaching methods. Thirty individual booths in the language laboratory may be separately controlled from a complex console which proved to be quite an intriguing instrument to Helen Eaton, her pupils, and many visitors. Several students from the French classes received letters from French pen pals. During the year, records, pictures, and candy direct from Paris were enjoyed by the students.

Students studied the gaily-colored posters which decorated the French lab.

Individual booths with two-way communication between instructor and pupil afforded opportunities for rapid advancement.

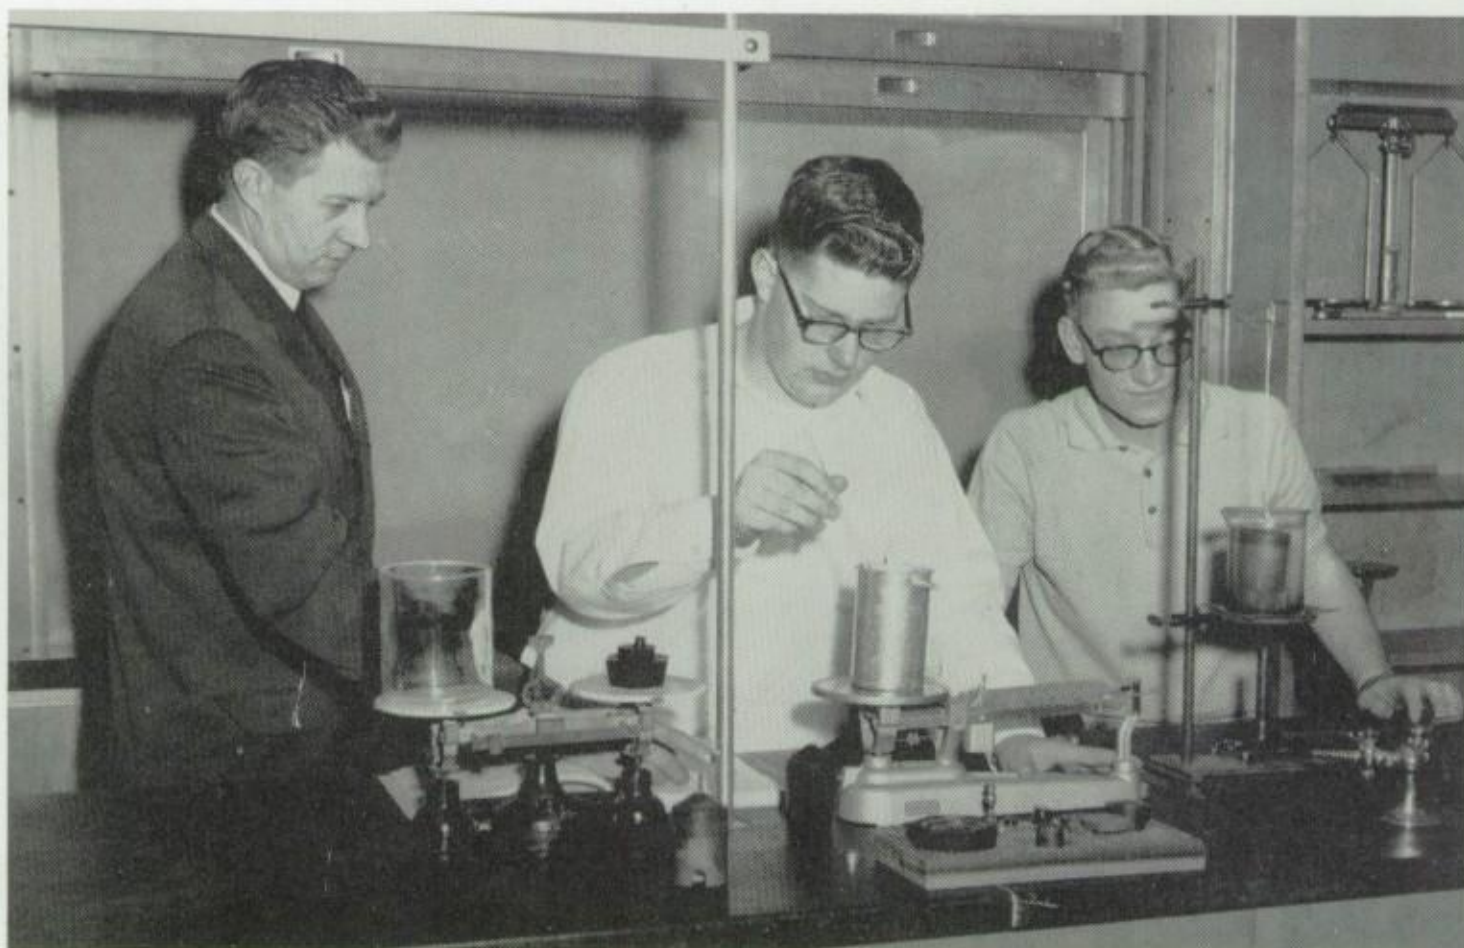

Commercial products displayed in one of the showcases served to verify the fact that Latin really isn't a dead language.

“Veni; vidi; vici”—I came; I saw; I conquered. The students were confident that they could apply Caesar’s words to themselves in their conquests of the Latin language.

A black and white photograph of a group of nine students in a classroom. They are seated at desks arranged in rows. The students are dressed in mid-20th-century attire. The background shows a wall with a patterned border and some classroom equipment.

Natural sciences led to a greater

Jim Wason and Jim Tarkington, under the supervision of Louis Baker, conducted an experiment to find the specific heat of metals.

The penetrating odor of hydrogen sulfide gas was prevented from invading the halls by use of a hood, demonstrated by Judy Snider.

Science received a big boost at Carroll High. After some delay, the new chemistry and physics lab was ready for use by daring students who were eager to learn about the components of the world. The lab contained various types of new equipment which intrigued the students. A hood, which is used to eliminate unpleasant odors, proved to be one of the main attractions. A preparation room and a dark room both were very useful. Physics students found the lab ideal for their experiments in the fields of heat, light, mechanics, and electricity.

"Pop" quizzes were easily concealed behind the sliding blackboards by Harold Eaton in the chemistry-physics lab.

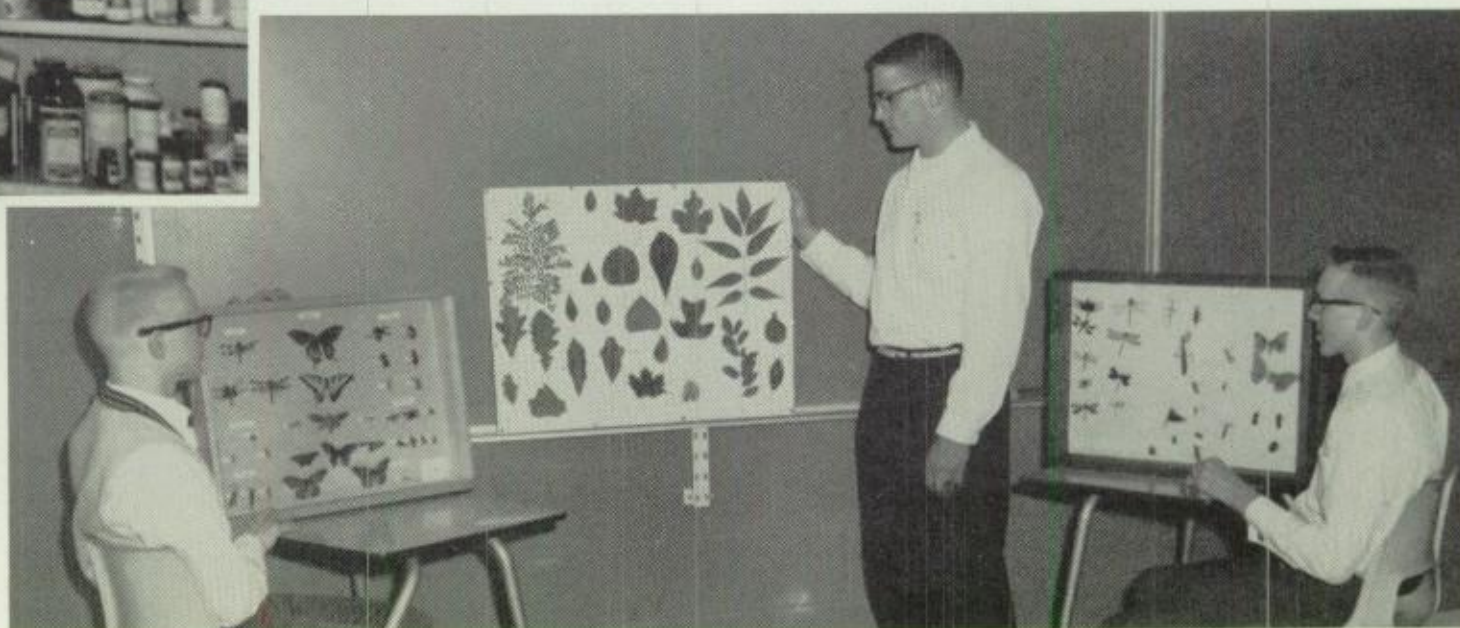

Films added much variety to Steve Mills' biology classes.

Harold Eaton, chemistry instructor, selected the necessary chemicals and equipment from the preparation room for the day's experiment.

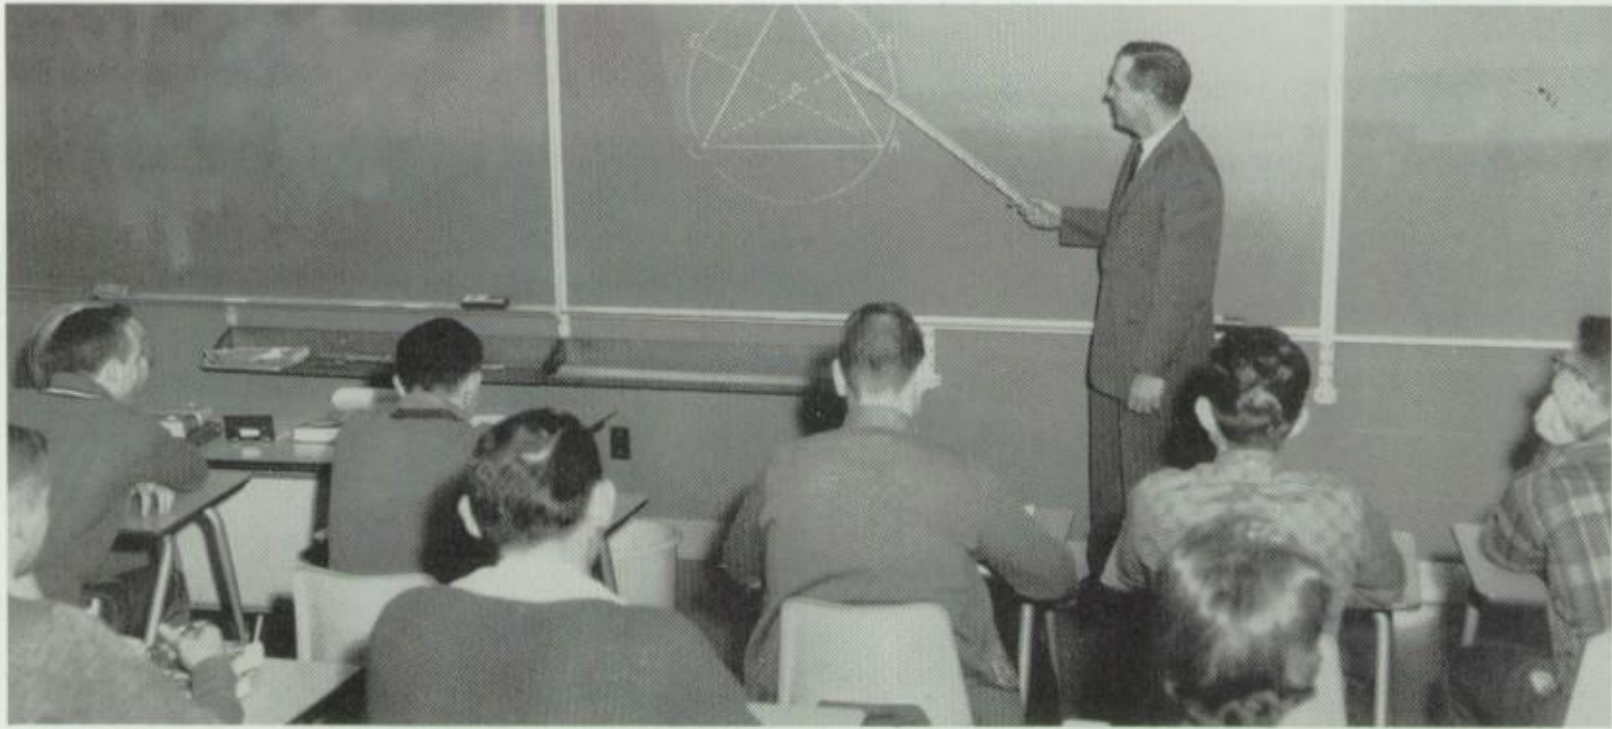

An up-to-date biology lab was also a feature of the new high school. Students enjoyed (?) dissection of various animals, and educational films were frequently viewed by the classes. An aquarium proved to be both fascinating and educational. First semester projects for the students included the collecting of leaves, insects, and wood samples. In the spring, the classes went to Chicago where they visited the Museum of Science and Industry.

Biology students, Tom Hanna, Sam Kirkpatrick, and Jack Lane, displayed their semester projects, insect and leaf collections.

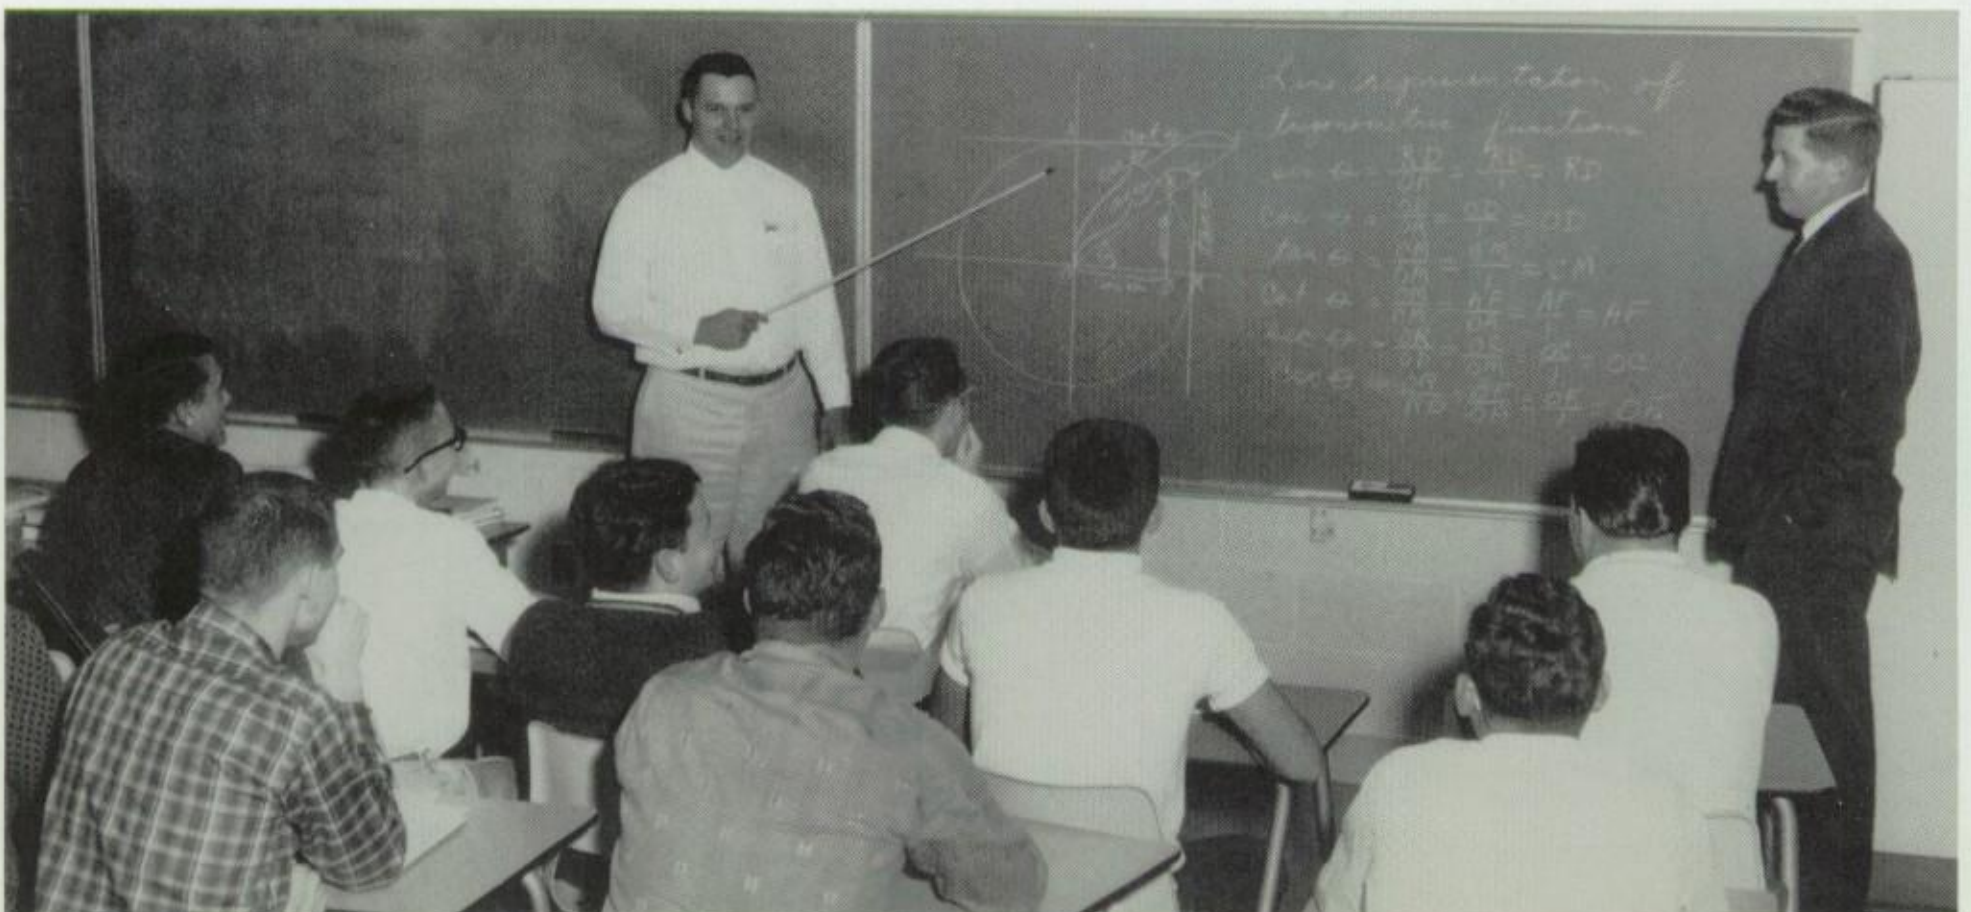

Students comprehended the basic truth

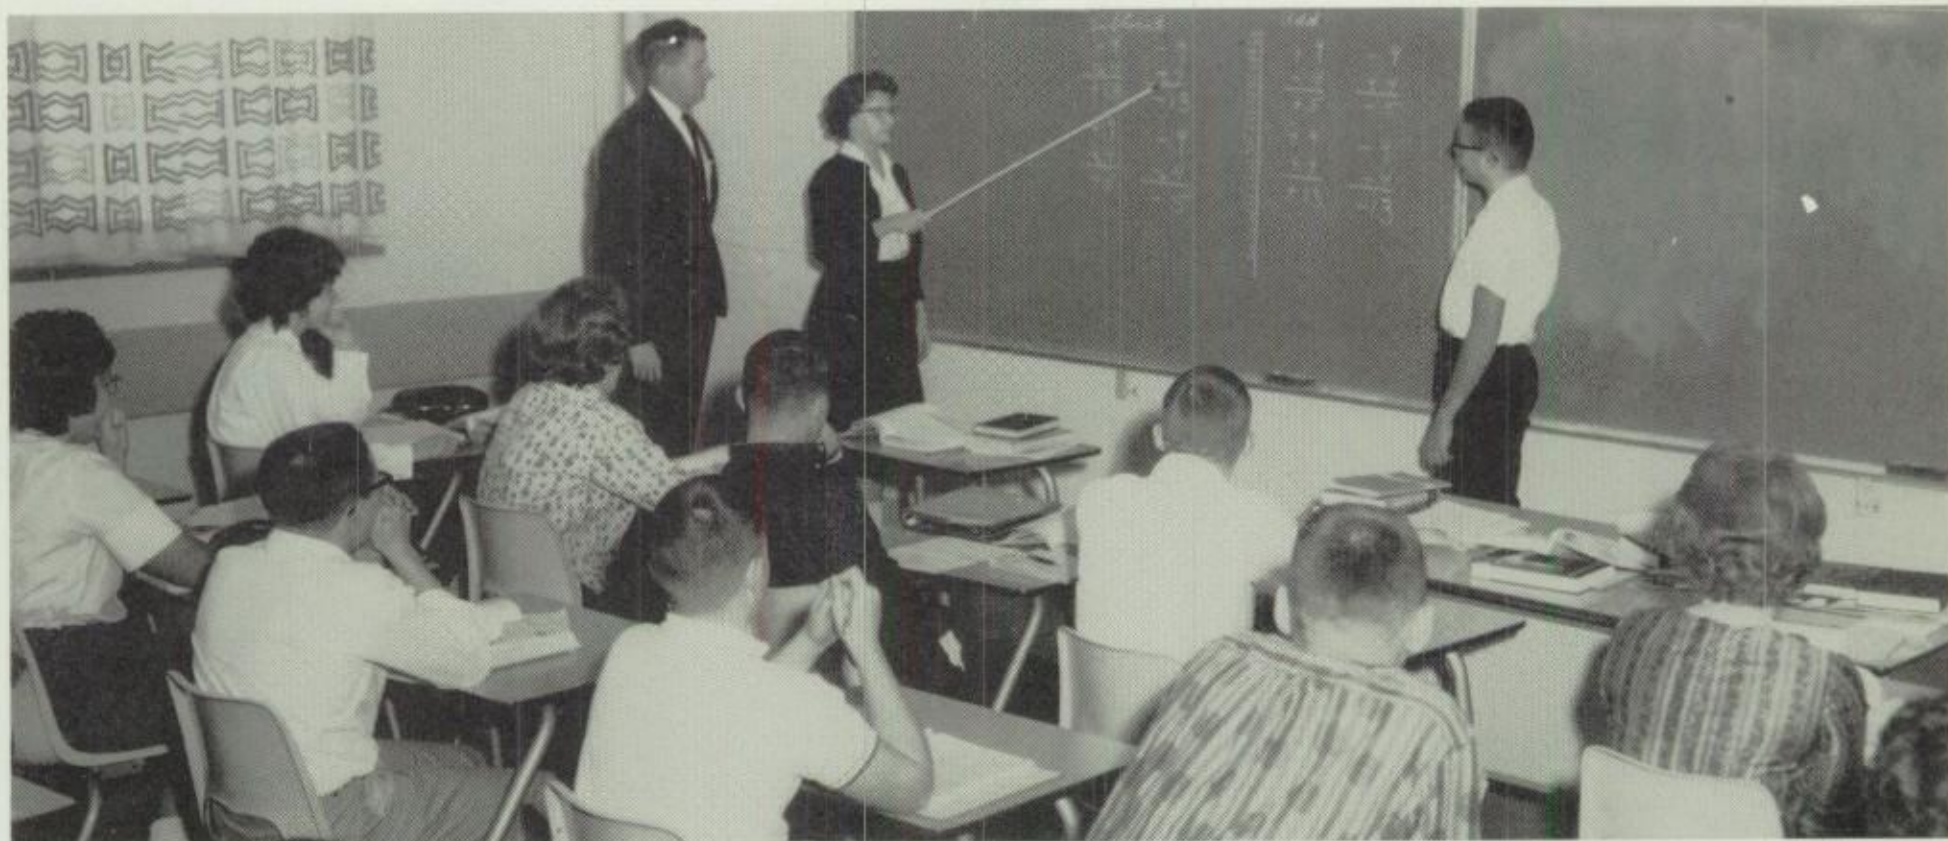

John Barber confronted his geometry class with complex geometric figures.

Teaching the mind to reason, analyze, and comprehend intricate figures and problems is the goal of mathematics. Math is used in everyday problems; therefore, it is one of the most important academic courses. For this reason, it is taken through elementary school and is offered through all four years of high school. Math plays an important role in this scientific age. Students who plan to further their education must attain a complete understanding of math during their high school years. Various careers in mathematics are now being created, for as the space age progresses, an understanding of mathematics increases. Future careers in math will prove to be interesting, useful, and profitable.

Under the supervision of Louis Baker, Robert Grubb explained trigonometric functions.

of mathematics . . . "Figures never lie."

The mysteries of negative numbers were revealed to Cheryl Barker and Kurt Harmon by Louis Baker.

Vinton Fry and Jim Matson discovered that second-year algebra problems can go on and on and on and on.

$X = ?$, log. cos. of an angle, AB is parallel and equal to CD—these are just a few of the various terms learned in math courses. Algebra students worked with "X, the unknown," and found him often troublesome. Trig students discovered a new and useful instrument—the slide rule. Axioms, theorems, and corollaries were the basic mathematical principles with which the geometry classes worked.

The past, present, and future acquainted

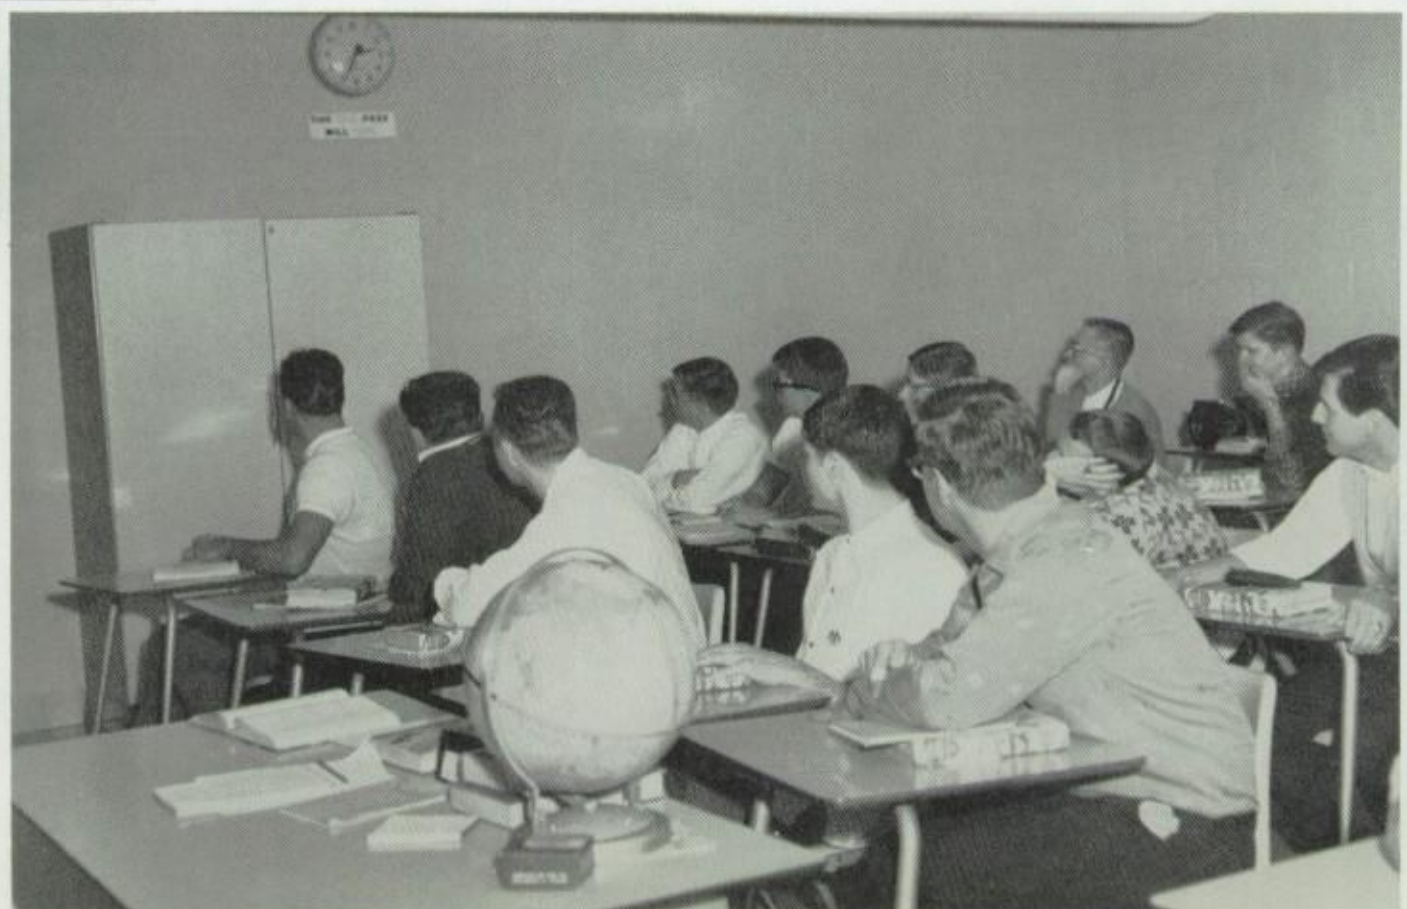

Ed Langston presented his argument on the proposition "Resolved: The United Nations organization should be abolished" in a senior government debate.

Halls resounded with election campaigning as the senior government class held mock primary and general elections. The seniors now feel that they can vote right along with any adult in this fall's elections. Mock elections were not the only excitement beheld by the class; debates gave the students a chance to air their beliefs and opinions on several matters. It seems that this year's senior class received adequate training and experience in law and politics.

John Barber explained the procedure of completing tax returns to Robert Hicks and Larry Hughes.

When Mr. Barber's classes were tempted to watch the clock, they were confronted with the warning: "Time Will Pass; Will You?"

students with their civic obligations.

World history student, Joellyn Garrison, attempted to locate the "Home of the Carroll Cougars" on the world globe.

Many students of United States and world history classes undoubtedly felt, as they studied the history of our country and the world up till now, that they were living and making history. They are quite right! It may not be noticeable for a few years; however, the thoughts and attitudes of today's young men and women are those which will strengthen or weaken the structure of our country in future years.

Classes came to a standstill while students listened to history in the making via the intercom as Lt. Colonel John Glenn, Jr. orbited the earth in the Friendship VII.

Juniors found Robert Fraley's U. S. history classes absorbing.

The most modern business equipment

Advanced typing students coped with multiple copies, printed forms, and speed typing.

Thirty-six new I.B.M. Selectric typewriters enabled typing students to learn the fastest and most accurate typing techniques.

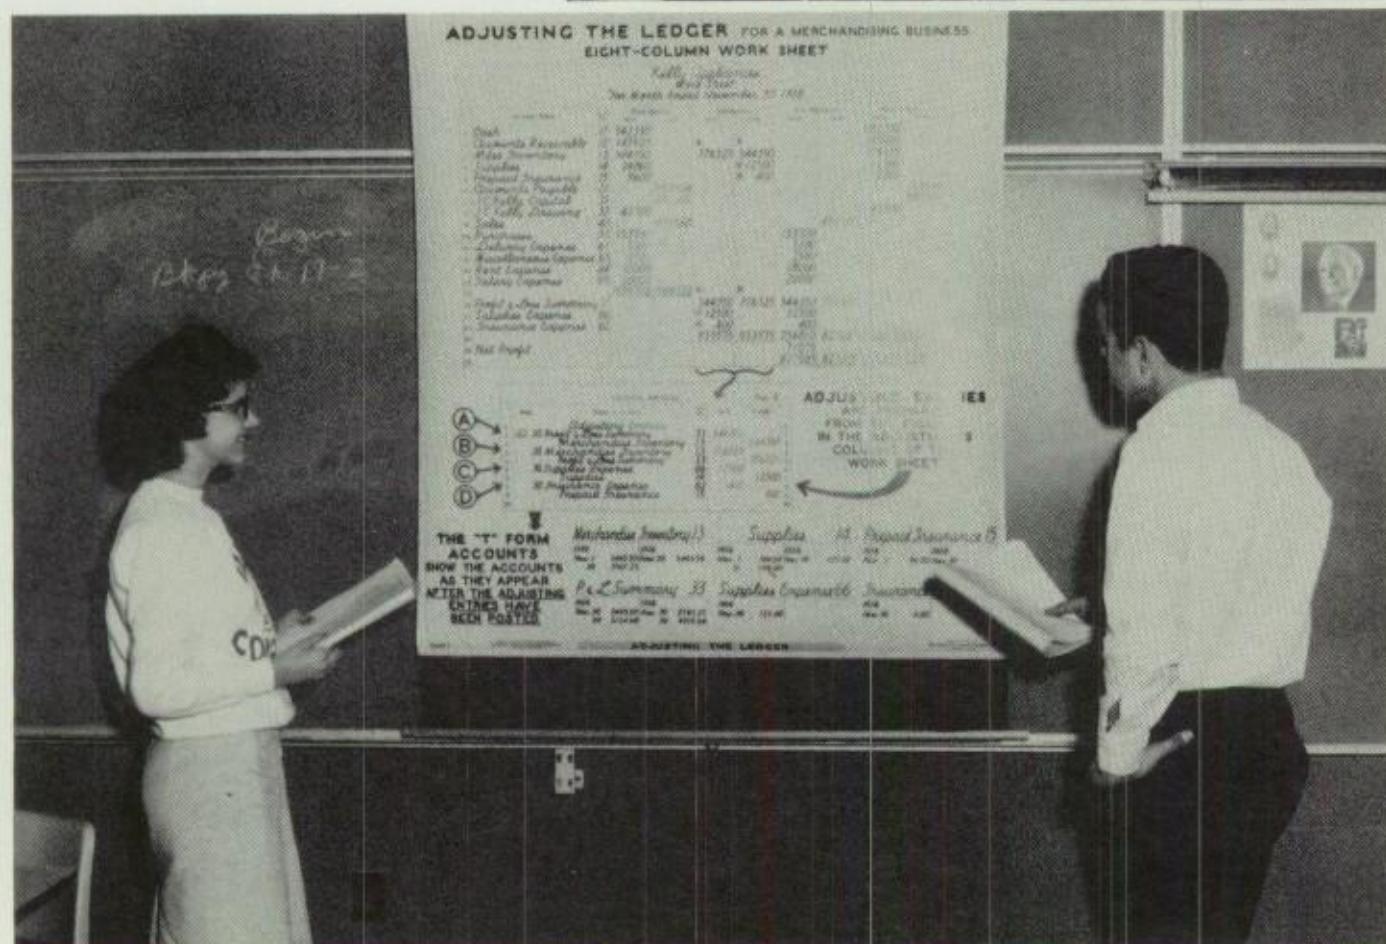

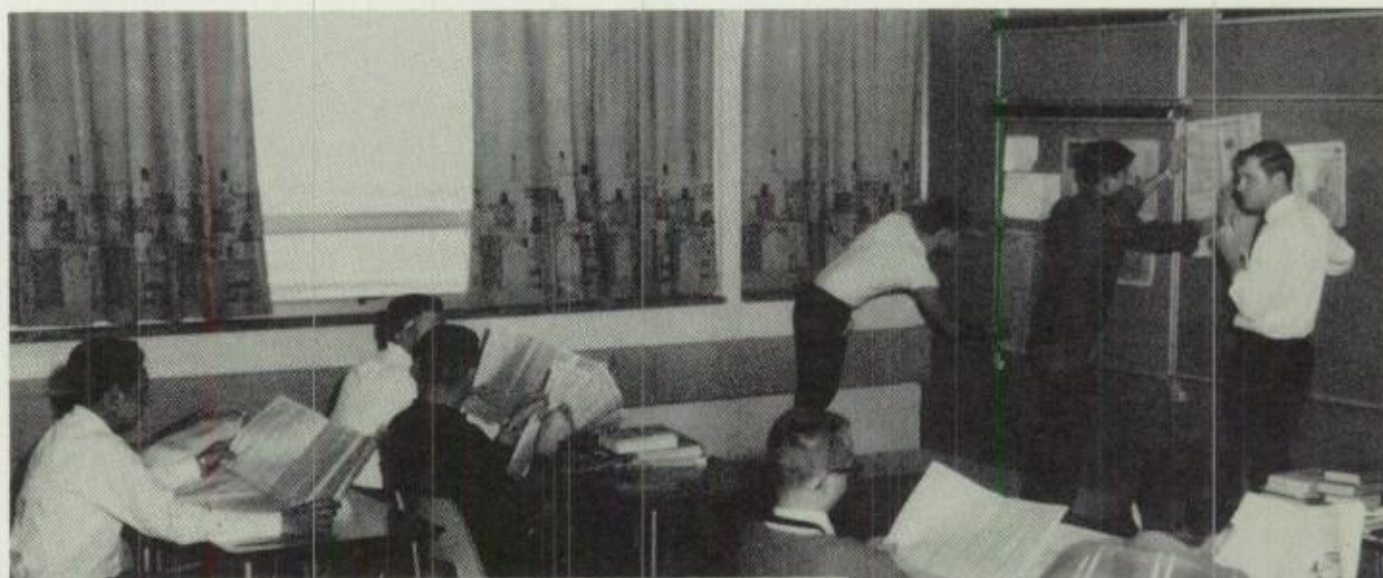

After I.B.M. placed their completely new Selectric typewriter on the market in mid-summer, they were immediately chosen for the business education department. This electric model, with no type bars or movable carriage, has letters on a revolving sphere which whirls across the paper as it prints. The typing desks, which can be adjusted to different heights by pressing a lever, were a great help in adapting to students of various sizes. A sink in the room was most convenient, for hands often were dirty after handling carbon paper, changing a ribbon, or working with the new electric mimeograph.

Aspiring financiers studied market quotations from the Wall Street Journal.

A series of bookkeeping charts permitted Jo Ann Cripe and Carroll Jervis to check their workbook problems.

The two business classrooms are divided by a glass partition. Students soon discovered that there was always a teacher on hand, even if one of them left the room for a few minutes! Individual tables in the bookkeeping room provided plenty of space—especially when working on practice sets. Electric adding machines, both 10-key and full-keyboard models, and a calculator were kept busy by bookkeeping and office practice students. A set of bookkeeping charts also proved valuable.

"Take a letter, please," Lois Metzger instructed the shorthand class.

Home economics proved it wa

Freshmen, Marcia Pearson, Betty Reef, Jan Shedron, and Sue Price, employed the many conveniences of the food preparation lab.

One of the important tasks of homemakers of tomorrow is to learn to cook and cook properly. Six unit-kitchens provided adequate facilities for practical experience. The senior students planned, prepared, and served dinners for the school board and faculty. Comments from the satisfied diners attested to the success of their efforts.

An automatic washer and dryer enabled the home economics department to maintain spotless linen.

D. E. Cripe and Company loaned furniture with which the home economics students experimented in room decorating.

truly "a woman's world."

Cora St. Amand, home economics instructor, taught her pupils the technicalities of garment construction.

Singer Slant-o-matic sewing machines made sewing a pleasure for students working in the clothing department.

The fitting-room mirrors were just the thing when Phylis Washington, Mary Lou Schnepf, Linda Langston, Alice Trapp, and Jo Ann Cripe modeled their fur projects.

Another phase of home economics is sewing. "To have the purchased look, and not the purchased price" was the motto of Cora St. Amand's seamstresses. This year there were some truly tailored looking garments made.

Aside from cooking and sewing, home economics girls gained knowledge from units about interior decorating, marriage, and child care.

Agriculture increased vocational skills.

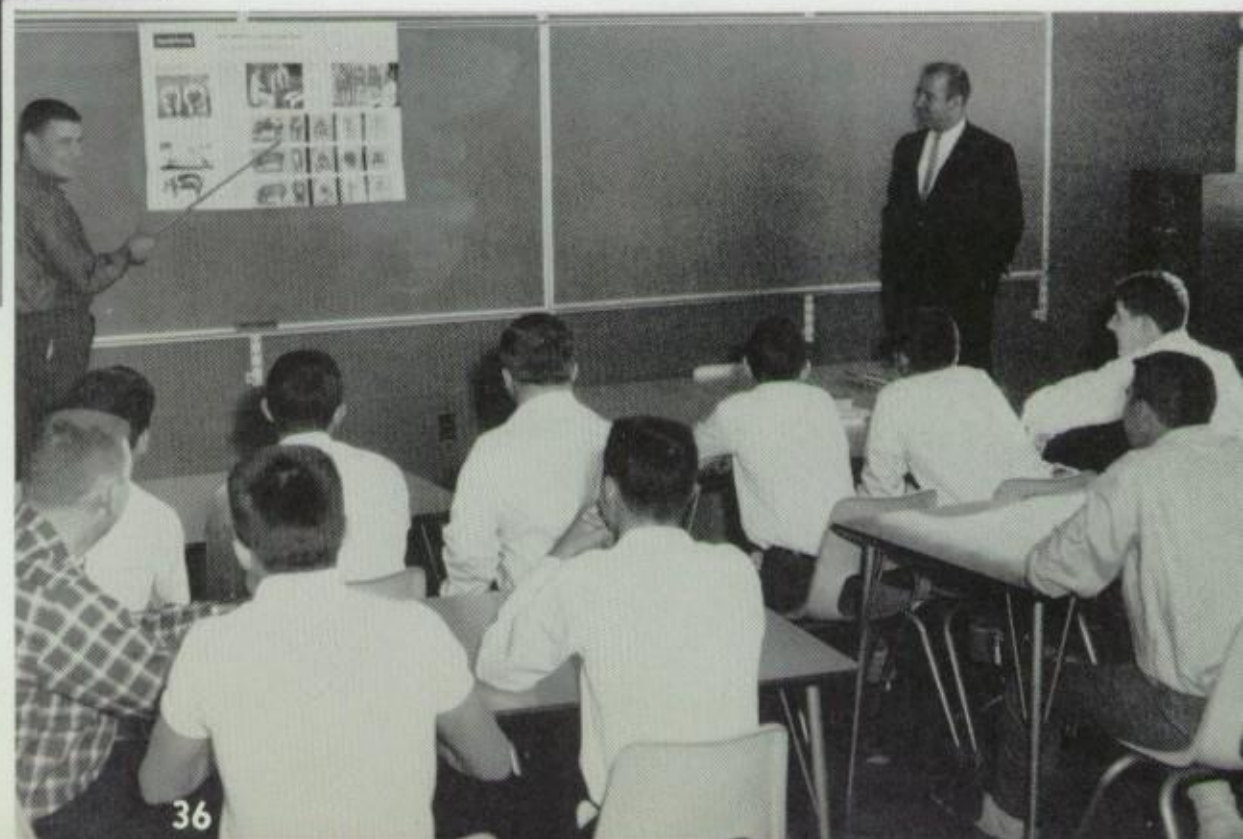

After finding the hog market strong, the agriculture class checked hogs to find if they were ready for sale.

Don Myers, Charlie Adams, John Hayes, and Richard Skiles found that soil testing pays off in better yields per acre.

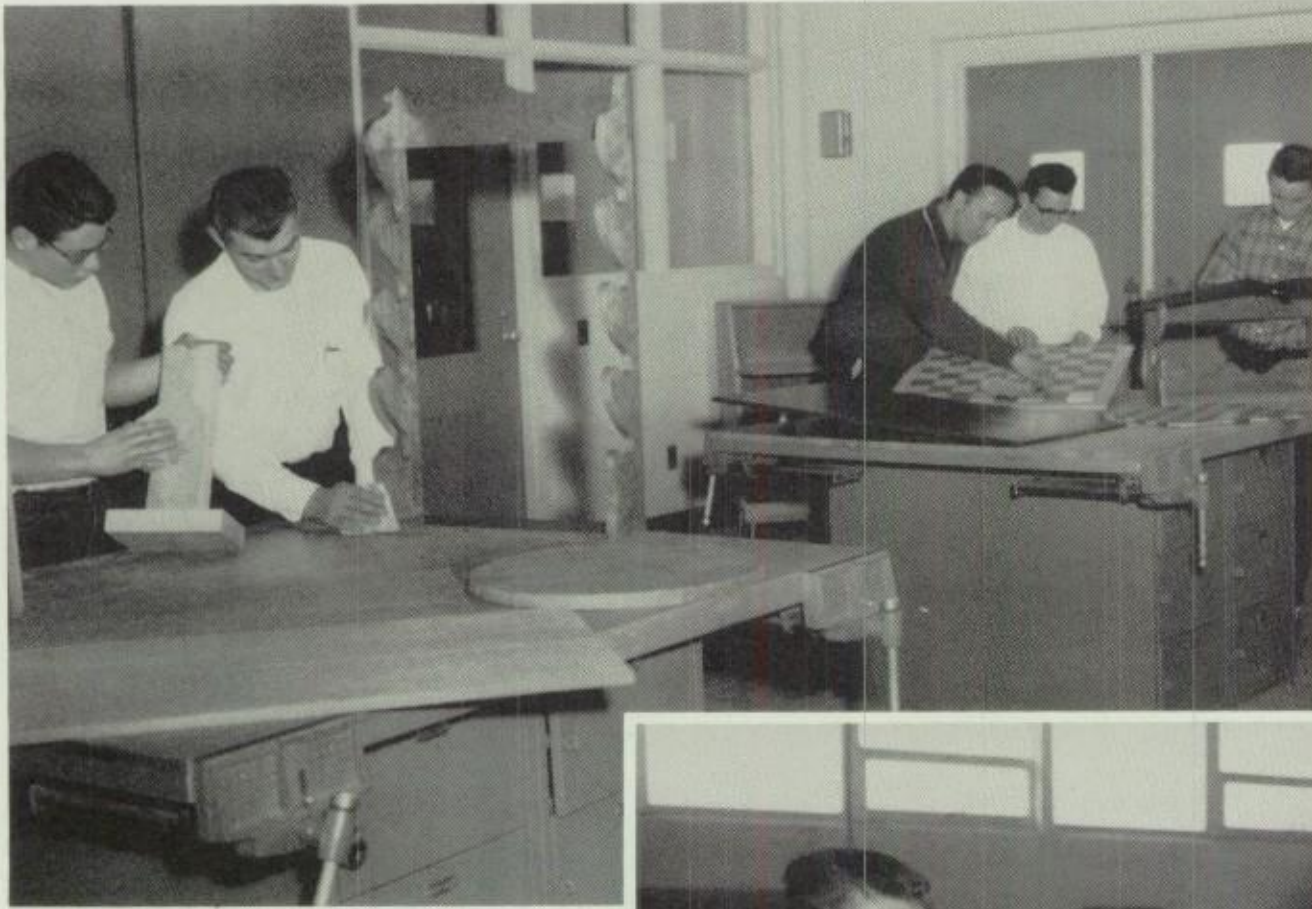

Agriculture students took a lively interest in the fine points of livestock production as pointed out by Richard Crume and Steven Mills, instructor.

An agriculture course helped to develop interest in the farming community around us. Various categories belong within the field of agriculture, for those who are willing to plan ahead for careers of tomorrow. Whether it be livestock judging, the proper time to plant corn, or even when to shear sheep, agriculture was of great benefit to all enrolled in the course. A fine understanding of nature was increased by courses of this type.

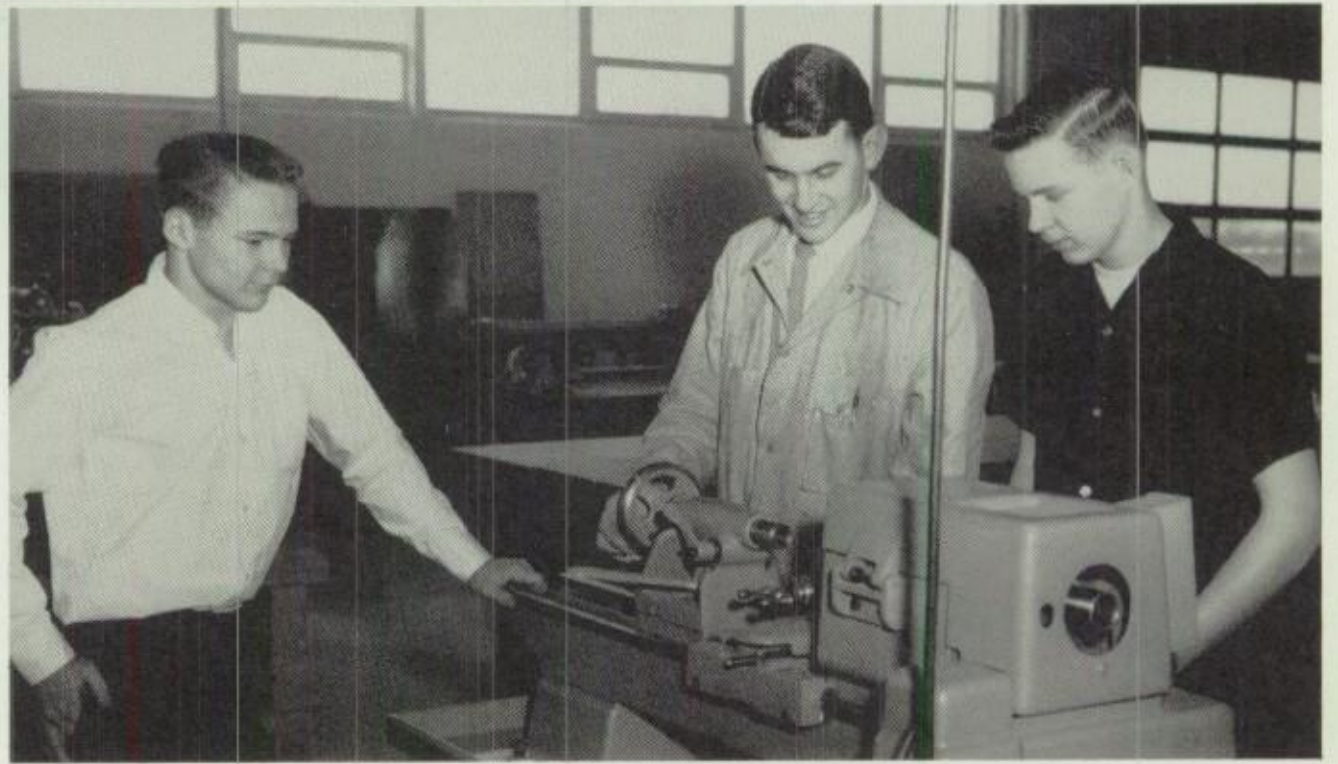

Shop students demonstrated abilities.

Don Campbell, Bill Walker, Jim Arion, Clarence Webster, and Bob Delaplane put the finishing touches on their gun racks, chess boards, and other wood-working projects.

Chet Riggle and Mike Gibson received instruction in metal turning from Rollo Leimer, instructor.

"It's so nice to have a man around the house!" This was especially true if that certain man was a shop student under Rollo Leimer's instruction. Going into Carroll's shop area was like exploring a new world if one wasn't able to identify machinery. There were such items as a radial arm saw, milling machine, bake oven, grinder, gas welder, and many others. Mr. Leimer had 40 boys enrolled in shop and endeavored to make them all expert "handy men."

The individually adjustable drawing tables aided John Crook, Kurt Harmon, and Bradley Mullendore in the art of making meticulous drawings.

Ideal conditions gave opportunity to Band members, Dwight Pullen, Joan Calloway, Arlene Smith, and Jack Johnson, kept their instruments in the individual lockers for safety and convenience.

With the arrival of new uniforms, the band and majorettes made an impressive showing. Members of the band are quite proud of their nearly unlimited facilities. There are sound-proof practice rooms, unique uniform closets, instrument storage, a special stroba tuning device, and the room is the newest in acoustical structure. Several concerts were presented by the band and chorus, and members participated in the district and state Indiana Music Educators Association Solo and Ensemble Contests. A department of this type is surely an encouraging factor for the musically-minded student.

Robert Wise, music instructor, composed the "Carroll Cougar Call."

CARROLL HIGH SCHOOL BAND

Tiered construction in the music room provided ideal conditions for band practice.

Art taught appreciation of culture.

Ronald Crain, student at John Herron Art School, lectured on the opportunities in the world of art.

Alan Ayres tried his hand at oil painting.

Penny Thomson prepared her greenware of St. Francis for bisquing.

After the resignation of Thomas Russell because of poor health, his wife, Lois Russell, assumed the position of art instructor at Carroll High.

With worksheets provided, the students were permitted to work at their own speeds and at those things which they preferred, such as charcoal drawings, cut-paper designing, pastels, oil painting, poster designing, chalk, and water colors. The students also tried their hands in linoleum-block cutting, clay modeling, and making displays. As a variation, discussions were held each Friday pertaining to the practical application in the world of art. One of the fondest hopes of Mrs. Russell and her art students was to have an art club instituted for the school and community.

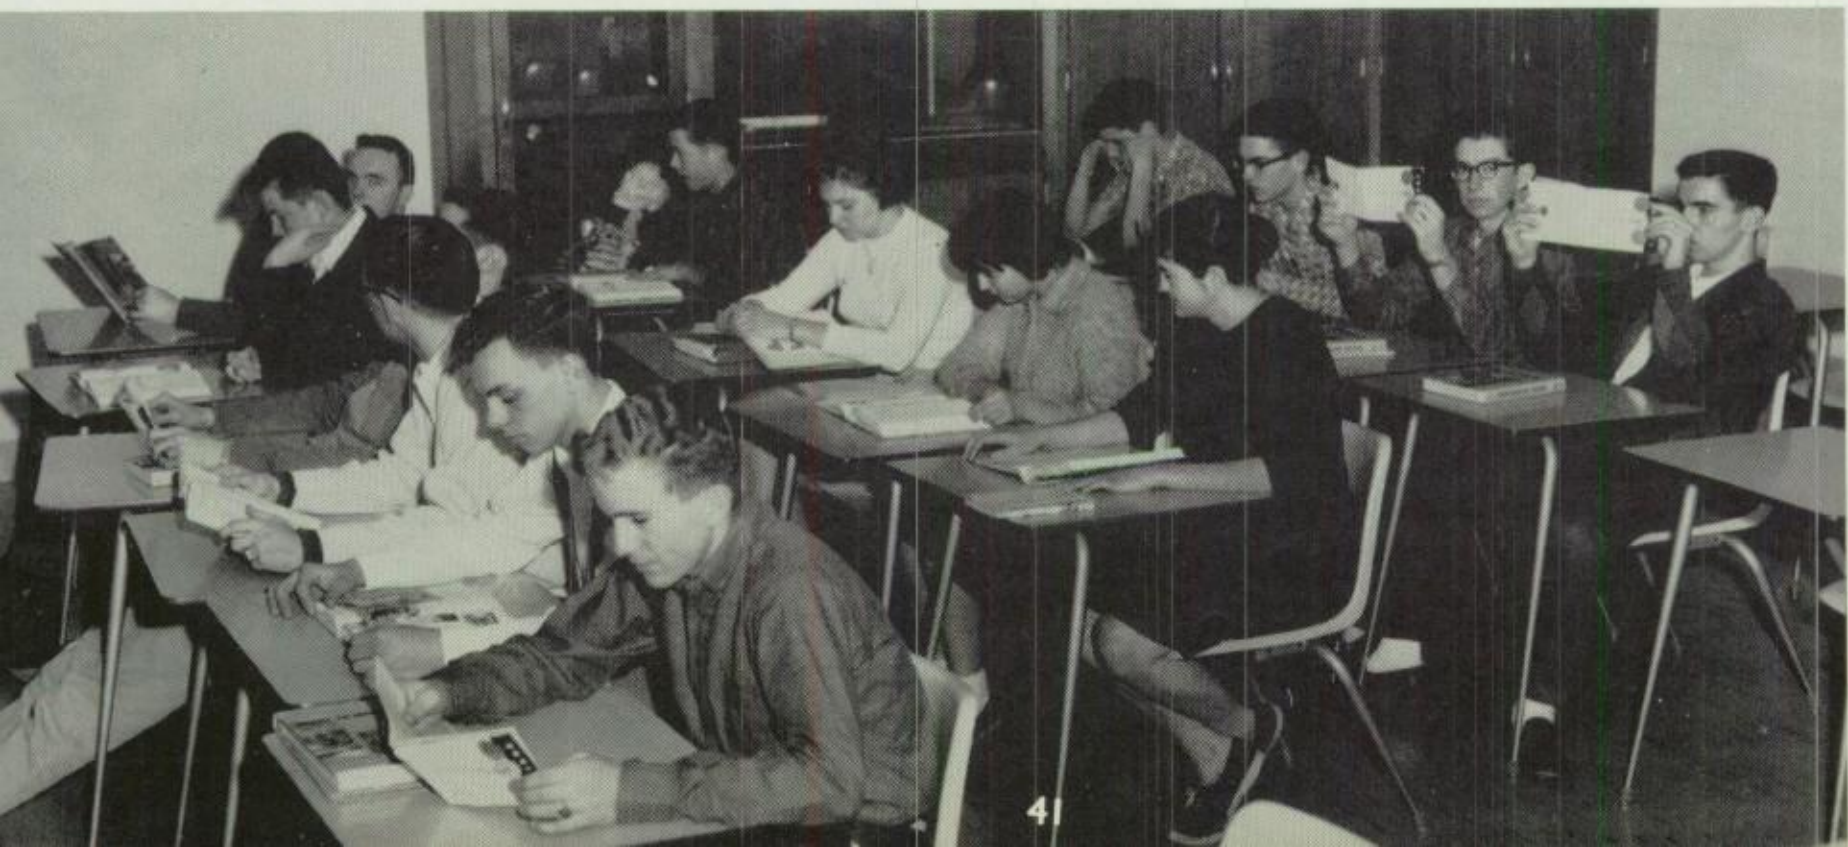

Driver's education trained future drivers.

Frank DeBruicker, instructor, took his place at the dual controls of the driver's training car as Rodger Tarkington prepared for "take off."

"What do I do first?" was the question which arose in the minds of all 80 students enrolled in driver's education classes. Changing a tire, tracing a gasoline drop, parallel parking, and making a U-turn are just a few of the tasks Frank DeBruicker asked his students to perform. One might drive too close to the edge of the road, scrape a culvert, turn into the side ditch, or "slam" on the brakes; but through it all, Mr. DeBruicker just sat there quietly and then uttered his familiar words, "Don't panic."

Just before taking the big step, driver's training students "boned up" for their drivers' examinations.

Health and physical education helped

Skulls and skeletons didn't haunt the freshman girls' health class as they studied the human body.

An understanding of the human body and its functions is important to everyone. Only through a health program can this type of knowledge be acquired. Health classes have observed models of the internal organs, eye, skeleton, and brain.

Personal hygiene is an important factor for consideration in health classes. Students learned the importance of inoculations and vaccinations, and they realized what the outcome can be if these safeguards are not used to their fullest capacity. Under the direction of Ann Pearce and Dick Mitchell, a first-aid program played an important part in the school's health program.

Hermie, the torso, and Dick Mitchell, the instructor, aided the health classes in understanding the human body.

Automatic showers, individual lockers, and adequate storage for equipment made ideal dressing room facilities for the physical education department.

build and maintain physical fitness.

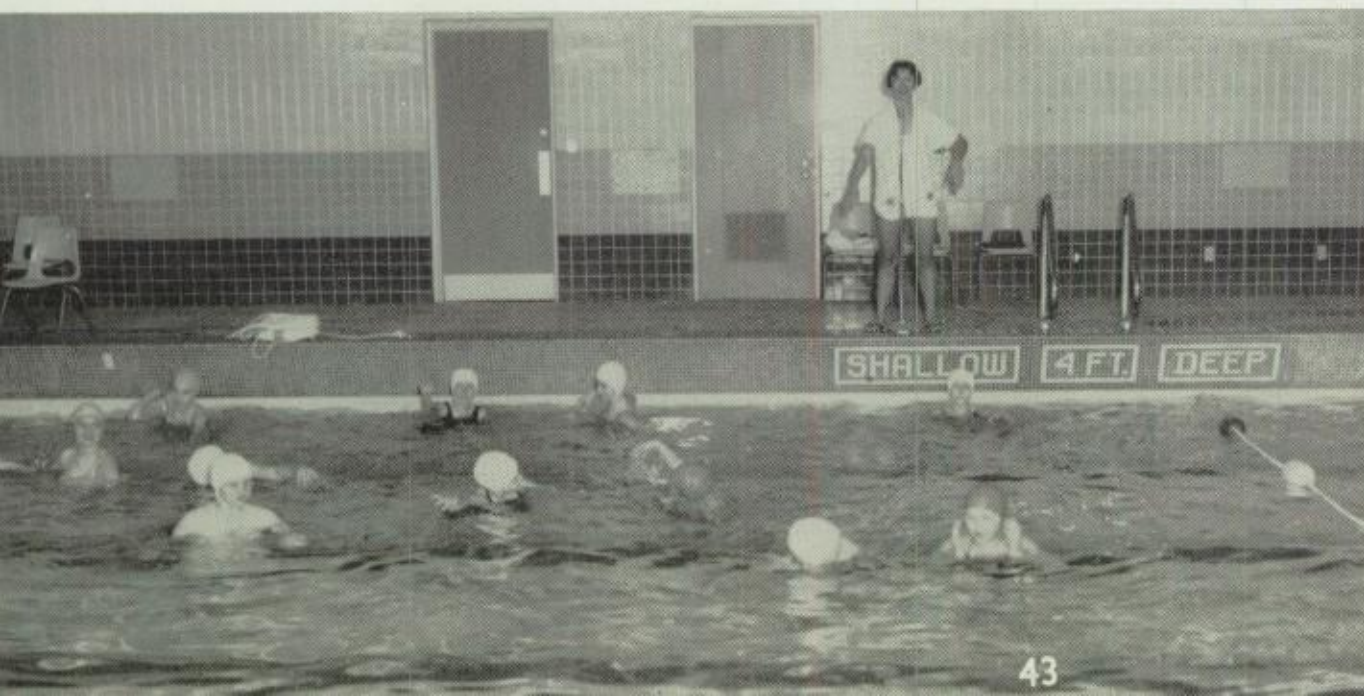

"One, two, three, squash!" cried Ann Pearce, instructor, and the girls' pyramid came tumbling down.

With a three and two count, Umpire Mitchell prepared to make the crucial decision.

Everyone participating in the physical education and health program was provided the opportunity to develop a well-trained mind and a healthy body. Although this was the first year for the new high school, it can be said that an auspicious beginning has been achieved. The olympic-size swimming pool made possible the addition of the aqua-maids to the extracurricular activities. Physical ability can be applied in many ways, and under the present system, there were means of expression for every person. Skill can be obtained in games, water sports, and physical exercises.

Ann Pearce instructed a beginning swimming class with the use of the under-water speaker.

The days that make us happy make us wise.

Activities

Student Council voiced student opinions.

SEATED: Kenneth Cooke, Sponsor; Fred Wheeler, Treasurer; Leann Skiles, Secretary; Stanley Evans, Vice President; Ed Langston, President; Harold Eaton, Faculty Representative.

STANDING: Cheryl Wilson, Dorita Avery, Arlene Smith, Kurt Harmon, Ed Wagoner, Dennis Cripe, Jerry Chaffin, Bill Pickart, Ed Chapman, Bob Myers, Ron Sibray, Jim Myer, Martha Guise, Lou Ann Milner.

Under the supervision of student council members, Fred Wheeler, Ed Langston, and Bill Pickart, preparations were made for the drawing of adult sectional tickets.

A large class representation was evident at the initial meeting of Carroll High School's Student Council. Although this is a new organization and new traditions seemed difficult to set, the student council planted its feet firmly and dug right in to act on many student policies.

Several convocations were presented for the enjoyment of the student body. One of these was given by the swing band, and a Christmas convocation was presented by the chorus and Latin Club.

The council was open to suggestions from the student body for the improvement of student relations and student-faculty relations. All the results of the council's efforts may not be evident for a year or two, but their accomplishments have laid the foundation for future student government.

National Honor Society put forth their goals:

With the addition of fourteen new members at an impressive formal induction, the new chapter of the National Honor Society at Carroll High School was begun. Its goal in the new school, to set standards of scholarship, character, leadership, and service, made it truly an honor organization. These desirable qualities raised the standard of the entire school.

The honor society witnessed the Greek play, Medea, at Purdue University's theater in the round. With various other activities experienced, the year was climaxed by a breakfast in honor of the senior members.

To familiarize the public with the goals of the National Honor Society, the senior members prepared a showcase display for open house.

Sunshine Society lent a helping hand.

Upholding their motto, "Others," the Sunshine Society has contributed to the community by presenting programs and distributing cookies and candy to various nursing homes throughout this area. As a part of the state-wide project, the organizations donated a substantial sum of money to the Riley Fund. A collection was also taken for the Polio Fund by the Sunshine girls. An important part of their program this year was the operation of the concession stand and coat check. A reward for hard work during the year was a sweetheart dance for Sunshine members and their escorts.

Sixty-one boys were inducted into Hi-Y

After passing an examination concerning the history, purpose, and platform of the club, sixty-one boys were initiated into Hi-Y. Because of the large number of members, Hi-Y was divided into two groups—a senior-junior group and a sophomore-freshman group. Each group selected its own officers, and every member tried to uphold the purpose of the organization: "To create, maintain, and extend throughout the school and community high standards of Christian character."

French Club practiced authentic French customs.

During the first six weeks of school a French club was organized with those students eligible who were then enrolled in French or who had completed one full year with at least a "C" average. For the initiation, the second-year members entertained the new members at a Smorgasbord. At their Christmas dance, Winter Wonderland, the club transformed a hall of Carroll High School into an authentic French sidewalk cafe. Over one hundred students traveled to the Indianapolis Coliseum to attend the Holiday on Ice performance in December, and later they visited a French restaurant and viewed Cinerama in the capital city. Members proudly displayed French Club pins which they purchased during the second semester.

Latin Club undertook cultural activities.

More than a hundred members belonged to the Latin Club. Since almost one-third of the students in high school find Latin quite useful in their other studies, Latin does not seem to be a "dead" language. It has proven to be a friendly language, as the parties and activities have been interesting, entertaining, and have given the students opportunities to make new acquaintances and friends. A special treat, made possible by the sponsor, Effie Douglas, was enjoyed by 77 students when they attended the spectacular, "Spartacus," an unforgettable motion picture. They also enjoyed one of Purdue Playshop's major productions, "The Trojan Women." The Indiana Junior Classical League asked the Latin Club to assist in hosting the state convention in April at Purdue University.

N.F.L. was the goal of speech students.

"Early to bed and early to rise" is the motto of the speech students the night before a speech contest. With shoes in one hand, speeches in the other, and their hasty breakfasts left unfinished, speech club members hurried to meet the bus and their sponsor, Ralph Thompson, for a long ride to places such as Howe Military Academy, New Haven, Peru, and Ft. Wayne. Dramatics, humorous, and original oratory were just three of the seven categories in which students could enter. After obtaining twenty-five points, one may be admitted to the National Forensic League. Carroll is one of the few schools in Indiana to have an N.F.L. charter, and the students certainly consider it an honor to be members.

F.F.A. taught progressive methods.

An important organization for boys who wish to gain skill and knowledge in the agriculture field is F.F.A. Coming together in a new consolidation helped these boys to realize that there are many different techniques in farming as near as the next community. Hard work and working together is perhaps one of the most important abilities learned in F.F.A. Truly an outstanding organization in any school, the Future Farmers of America are off to a good start in Carroll High.

Swing Band achieved first place honors.

Sixteen musically-inclined students combined their talents, and with the help of Robert Wise, music instructor, formed the Carroll High Swing Band. Members ranged from freshmen to seniors. As their attire, the members chose white blazers with black slacks or skirts. Although newly organized, the group performed at other schools and entertained at various Carroll High dances, pleasing everyone with their arrangements from classical to popular and jazz. In January, the swing band placed first at the district music contest which was held at Delphi. A few weeks later, they were again victorious in the state contest at Butler University.

Members of the swing band proved their devotion to music by attending weekly 7:30 a.m. practice sessions.

Juniors sponsored "Tammy Tell Me True."

Tammy, a Mississippi riverboat girl, went to college to find the boy she loved. The people she came in contact with and how they affected her, caused many changes in her ways of thinking. Her acquaintances at college caused her much trouble and sorrow, but all her experiences showed her the ways of love, life, and people.

School paper was christened Cougar's Corner.

During the first weeks of school, the student body selected Cougar's Corner as the name for the school paper. Once each six weeks, the paper's staff members collected their ideas and information and edited a pleasing paper which was enthusiastically awaited by the students. The paper contained sports, editorials, jokes, original writing, and other school news seasoned with a bit of humor. The staff was composed of students enrolled in the office practice class.

UPPER: Jack Nelson watched Gloria Garrison, Carolyn Mocherman, Dorita Avery, and Frances York as they rolled the press and prepared a stencil for the next issue of Cougar's Corner.

The Argosy preserved highlights of the year.

Under the cloak of secrecy, the Argosy staff went about their work of choosing a name, taking pictures to record activities, preparing write-ups, and securing subscriptions. It took hard work on the part of each staff member, but deadlines were met. The 1962 Argosy endeavored to show by pictures and words why we know . . . "We're the luckiest kids!"

UPPER: Co-chairmen of the circulation staff, Joe Huse and Harry Jones, gleefully counted subscription money collected by salesmen: Frances York, Julia Hendrix, Charles Adams, Tom Langston, Peggy Smith, Kay Eikenberry, Wanita Howard, and Robin Johnson.

Why, that's the best game of them all!

Sweatshirts identified the Girls' Cheer Bloc.

Coach Dick Mitchell presented Little Miss America (Bonnie Howard) with flowers and a kiss at the pep session before the Delphi game.

The colorful girls' cheer bloc of Carroll High School was one of the best organized and loudest cheer blocs in the surrounding area. Composed of 72 girls dressed in either Carroll High sweatshirts or white blouses, the cheer bloc backed the team with utmost enthusiasm—never stopping, but always rooting for and backing the team. The cheer bloc was led by the capable varsity and B-team cheerleaders, assisted by Ann Pearce, the girls' physical education instructor.

Girls, on behalf of the student body, thank you for giving Carroll High School one of the best cheer blocs in the area and for making the whole school proud of you.

Boys' Cheer Bloc backed the Cougars.

Boys, 56 strong, were proud to be a part of the cheer bloc during the first year at Carroll High. Sometimes it was a question whether there was a boys' cheer bloc, for they became so interested in the game they would forget to support the cheerleaders and took a backseat to the girls' cheer bloc. However, as things became edgy at the crisis or climax of a game, the booming voices of the boys' cheer bloc were heard. Although yelling for the same cause, the boys were sometimes not in unison, but their loud cries for victory could not be denied. Often led by "Good old Joe C." their shouts thundered throughout the gymnasium.

Carroll Cougar Call

We are the Carroll Cougars;
We're proud as we can be.
We have the team and spirit—
Fight on to victory! Rah! Rah!
Loyal and true, we're for you—
For you with all our might!
We are the Cougars,
The Carroll Cougars;
Fight for the blue and white!

Varsity valiantly upheld team spirit.

The members of the varsity squad were a hardy, determined group, though they won only three games. To many, this seems odd, and to many it is sad and regretful; but one must remember that this is the first year for a team at Carroll High. The boys have many things to work out to become accustomed to playing ball as a team. Who are we to judge these boys? They are not machines to be turned on and off or mechanical robots to fulfill a wish or command. They are human beings and must be treated as such. The team worked hard this year, and under the supervision of Dick Mitchell, they have improved greatly since the start of the season. The team has had several near wins, losing by only a point or two. It takes time to build a ball club, and in a few years Carroll High varsity may be in the headlines as the winner of the sectional.

B Team had a rousing season.

Coached by Robert Fraley, the B team had a successful and winning year. The team was made up of underclassmen, freshmen and sophomores. They had what it took to be strong and victorious: desire, competitiveness, skill, and, most of all, team spirit. With this abundance of drive, the B team pulled out victories from seemingly larger and more skillful teams; many of the victories were made possible by that "little extra" push. Mr. Fraley had a good, sound squad under his direction.

Freshmen won first Carroll High School trophy.

The Carroll frosh played a good brand of ball most of the season, and if these boys continue improving they should be one of the "tough" teams in the surrounding territory. The local freshmen finished the season with eight wins and six losses. Two of the wins were registered in winning the first tourney in the school's history. This was the highlight of the freshman season. Bradley Mullendore won the freshman free-throw trophy, beating Craig Martin by only a fraction of a per cent.

Freshman captain, Dennis Cripe, presented Principal Kenneth Cooke with the first entry for the trophy case.

Many boys answered the Cross Country call.

To many boys on the team, cross country was a new experience and challenge. Since this is one of the more grueling and less popular sports, the turnout and participation on the team was very encouraging. Cross country is a team sport all the way; that fifth man across the finish line of the two-mile course can be just as important as the first because the team with the least amount of points wins the meet. Scoring is determined by the position and number of the team finishes—first place has only one point; second, two points; and so on. This is the reason it takes team spirit and competitiveness to win in a meet.

Tom Williams and Bob Craig ran laps to get in shape for the cross country season.

Carroll High School is the consummation of the hopes and dreams, the plans and labor, of many people. But especially is credit due to the school board for their diligent efforts which have resulted in the beautiful school building which is the pride of everyone in the community.

The contract for the building was let on June 1, 1960. Cost of the building was $1,274,720, exclusive of land, architect fees, and legal fees. Equipment amounted to $180,000. Maximum capacity is estimated to be 900 students, so there is plenty of room for growth.

Open house on January 28, 1962, brought thousands of visitors from all over the state. Many words of wonder and admiration were voiced as the visitors agreed that . . . "We're the luckiest kids!"

Special Education

Special Education

Educators tend to accept as axiomatic the statement, "Education is for all American children." In an attempt to provide a more complete educational program for the community, the Carroll Consolidated School Corporation added a class in special education to the school program. This class is a part of the state's M-1 program.

The class is adapted to meet the needs of each child. It places them in a situation where they can progress at their own rate. Here they can receive a realistic education in terms of their own abilities. Also, it provides a place where each can experience success daily. Because there are fewer students in the class, the teacher is able to give more individual help. The objectives are those of any education: personal adequacy, social competency, economic efficiency, and civic responsibility—but with stress on the first three.

Students are selected for the class on the basis of results obtained through the use of individual tests and information obtained from a conference with the parents. The testing, interviewing, and final evaluations are handled by the Achievement Center for Children, Purdue University.

Everyone profits from such programs because all children receive a better education and are more adequately prepared to become contributing members of society.
